We move so many pianos we could give lessons.

In fact we do. The professionals from Despatch Moving and Storage that pad, pack, load, drive, and unload your possessions have received hours and hours of training long before we let them touch any of your belongings, let alone your Baby.

Despatch began moving people in 1910. Even then they realized the key to successful moves wasn't just strong backs and powerful trucks. It was heart. Caring about the people they were moving and the things that made their house a home were more important.

Today, the thank you letters we receive from our clients are music to our ears. Many of the words used strike a familiar chord – careful, friendly, understanding, professional, courteous, and efficient. We're not surprised. Moving pianos is not our only forte. Our staff knows how to baby your antiques, collectibles, fine art, furniture, as well as your floors and walls. In short, if you're planning a move call us — but only if you want to be babied in grand style.

Three Centuries Of U.S. Opens At The Legendary Course Of Shinnecock

By Dan Rattiner

As you read this, a giant tent city is being constructed at the historic and very exclusive Shinnecock Golf Club in Southampton. The tents will house network television facilities, a press room, dozens of booths selling golf trinkets and other paraphernalia, a scorekeeper's room, a meeting room, security facilities, changing rooms, a pro shop, administration facilities, dining rooms, kitchens and VIP spectator facilities. A steel pedestrian bridge is being built over Route 27 between the property owned by the golf club and property owned by the Long Island Rail Road. A temporary train station is being opened there. And fences completely surround the golf course.

In three weeks, the U. S. Open golf championships will be played at Shinnecock. This will be the fourth time this tournament has been held here. I missed the first one, was at the second and third and expect to be at the fourth. No other golf course in the country has hosted the U. S. Open more times than Shinnecock.

The Shinnecock Golf Course is the second oldest in America. In 1890, millionaire Cornelius Vanderbilt was vacationing in Biarritz, France when he went to play a new game, called golf, at a nearby resort. The game had been developed in Scotland and there in Biarritz, those wishing to play it could be taken around a course by a Scottish professional golfer named Willie Dunn. So taken with the game was Vanderbilt that, prior to his return to America, he arranged to hire Dunn and have him brought, along with all his clubs and golf balls, to Southampton in order to oversee the building of a private golf course. Soon thereafter, Vanderbilt and some of his friends were out on a hilltop in Shinnecock with golfing sticks and golf balls with the Scotsman showing them how it was done. After the first shot, reportedly taken by Vanderbilt, the men decided to build a twelve-hole course in Shinnecock. They put up some money and hired numerous members of the Shinnecock Indian tribe to construct it.

The first U. S. Open was played in Newport in 1895. The second U. S. Open was played at Shinnecock. And there was a controversy. Local officials had entered into the tournament a 16-year-old black boy named John Shippen Jr., who many felt was the best player at the fledgling club. The day before the Open, the entire contingent of European golfers, who had come to Southampton specifically to play the Open, said they would withdraw if Shippen was allowed to play. The President of the tournament said go ahead and withdraw. Shippen plays. And the threatened strike collapsed.

In the first of the two rounds of play,

Russell Simmons will be honored with Clive Davis, Mario Baralik, Zac Posen, and David LaChapelle at Santo de Cartier's 100th Anniversary celebration at the Park Ave. Armory in New York on May 25. The fete introduces two new watches, the Santos 100 and Santos-Dumont.

Martha Stewart, with homes in East Hampton and Connecticut, faces sentencing on June 17 with her former stockbroker, Peter Bacanovic. Bios underway are by Christopher Byron, Martha, Inc., and Ms. Stewart's former neighbor, Lloyd Allen, Understanding Martha, which is the more favorable tome.

Bridgehampton Polo will have a new spin this summer with the hip public relations team, Bregman Nyman Cafarelli's Matt Hein and Noah Tepperberg, and Jason Strauss of the Strategic Group, supplanting London Misher's Lauren London. You'll remember the gentlemen from the Conscience Point Inn in Southampton, and Chelsea's Suite 16. Their Playstation 2 bash will be back, too, in July, putting the show into the business.

Dan's Papers cover artist, Daniel Pollera, illustrated the book cover for Twelve Times Blessed, a novel by Jacquelyn Mitchard.

Kathleen Turner of East Hampton is actively supporting presidential candidate John Kerry and speaking out on WNYC's American Dialogue. The sultry voiced actress is a Cannes juror and she is working on a film project of her own. She may also return to Broadway soon.

Daniel J. Rodas, Provost of Southampton College, announced the 2004 Trophy Club Ticket Package in conjunction with the U.S. Golf Association's 2004 US Open, June 14 – 20 at the Shinnecock Hills Golf Club. The package will raise money for student scholarships through the sale of a limited number of Trophy Club Ticket Packages. These include one 7-day pass providing full access to the tournament; full access to the Trophy Club – the exclusive on site, air-conditioned, tented facility offering a lounge atmosphere, food and beverage options and full television coverage; entry to the Chancellor's Golf Ball – a cocktail party in the Kanawha Lobby of Chancellor's Hall at Southampton College on June 17 with a complimentary open bar, carving station and hors d'oeuvres. The Trophy Club Ticket Package Costs $1,500. 516-299-4196 or felice.kobrick@liu.edu

Shippen tied for the lead with five other players, but on the back nine of the second round, his game fell apart. On the par four 13th hole, he drove into a sandy road and missed his recovery. He recorded an 11. And when the dust had cleared, he had dropped to seventh place, seven strokes back of the winner, James Foulis.

Shippen played in four more U. S. Opens after that, but never again seriously contended. He later became a golf pro at the Shady Rest Country Club in New Jersey.

If the Shinnecock Golf Club was the most exclusive among the most exclusive golf clubs in America, it soon became also one of the most difficult in America. In 1927, the main east-west artery through the Hamptons, Route 27, was built through Southampton. At Shinnecock, it cut the course in two. In response, the club members purchased more than 200 acres north of the existing club, and over the next three years, with the course closed for these changes, sold the land south of the Highway, and added holes onto the new land to the north. The result, designed by Howard Twomey and William Flynn, took full advantage of the immense number of acres — 330 all together — to build a course that was enormously challenging. The fairways zig this way and that. The holes double back on each other. The stiff wind, almost always blowing, makes planning each shot a navigational exercise that is unparalleled. Few people are able to consistently break par.

In 1982, the club membership accepted a request to allow the 1986 U. S. Open to be played here. In the opening round in 1986, not one single golfer — and these were the best in the world — was able to break par. The leader at the end of that round, Bob Tway, shot a 70, which is just par, and after his round, said "I have never played such a difficult course under such difficult conditions." In the second round, reigning Masters champion and four-time U.S. Open Champion Jack Nicklaus lost a ball for the first time ever. Neither the golfers or the officials or the spectators could find it. He shot a 77. "If I had made the little putt at 18, I'd have been happy with a 76," he said.

It was a marvelous event. I recall that on the fourth and final round of the event, I followed Australian Gregg "The Shark" Norman on the back nine as he made a run for the lead. He faded in the end, however, and so the Open was won by Raymond Floyd, who completed the four rounds in one under par.

In 1995, the match was held at Shinnecock again. Apparently the Open committee was very happy with the way things had gone before, and so was the membership of the club. But once again, the golfers had difficulty with the course. In the end, Corey Pavin won the event, but his total for the four rounds was a sky high 280. Never before and never again would a U. S. Open be won without anyone breaking par for their total.

Incidentally, the talk of the 1995 Open was a young amateur named Tiger Woods. He was the reigning Amateur Champion and great things were expected of him, but he injured his wrist taking a difficult shot out of the rough during the second round and had to withdraw.

The event drew about 25,000 people in both 1986 and 1995, and they expect the same number this year. But there have been some changes. Security is very tight now, and the fencing around the course is a new development. Guards will be everywhere. For security reasons, and also for traffic flow reasons, parking for spectators will not be on Hill Street or at the College, but at the airport parking lot in Westhampton Beach 14 miles away. A fleet of shuttle buses will take people to and from the event. This particular change has led to yet another change; during the last two U.S. Opens held at Shinnecock, the Shinnecock Indian Nation ran the parking operations, leasing out tribal land to hold the thousands of cars and tour buses which came from all over. They won't have it this year.

Although everybody in this area seems to be going to the event, tickets are very hard to come by. How this makes sense I do not know, but apparently people are figuring out ways to attend. The Open, scheduled for June 17-20, will be the highlight of the month as far as excitement and commerce are concerned. And just maybe the Tiger, a multi-millionaire and a little off his game in recent outings, will regain his touch and return to the leader board for a win. If he doesn't and V.J. Singh wins or does substantially better than Tiger, Singh will, on the points, knock Tiger Woods out of rating as the top golfer on the tour, a ranking Tiger has held for more than three years running.

How A Japanese Admiral In 1941 Caused A Personal Best in 2004

By Dan Rattiner

It's really amazing how our bodies work. Here's a sequence of events involving mine that is instructive, indeed.

Sunday night, I returned home from a weekend in Boston, and around 10 p.m. began to work on a big pile of Dan's Papers business papers that I needed to go through for Monday morning. I crawled into bed at 2 a.m.

Monday morning at 7 a.m., I was awakened by the sound of rain on the roof, thunder and barking — dogs barking at the thunder. I was exhausted from so little sleep, but having been stunned awake, there was no getting around the fact that I had to get up. So I did.

My morning routine is to get dressed, exercise, eat breakfast and then go to work. On nice days, I play basketball for twenty minutes in the backyard where I have a court. But this was not a nice day. On not nice days, I get on a treadmill, turn on a nearby TV and run along for fifteen minutes. Then I have breakfast.

I would watch it from the beginning of the attack until Yamamoto gave the order to withdraw the Japanese fleet.

When I got on the treadmill and turned the TV on, the first words I heard were, "What is taking him so long? Why is he typing so slowly?" The picture came up and there was Admiral Yamamoto standing on the bridge of a Japanese battleship, shouting at an aide. I was watching the movie Tora! Tora! Tora! and the Japanese were just about to launch the planes for the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor. This would happen in the next five minutes.

I saw this movie when it came out in 1988, but not again since then. It didn't win any awards. But the attack on Pearl Harbor is pretty spectacular and you have to get into the film about forty minutes before you get to it. There it was. I was pacing along on the treadmill. I would watch it from the beginning of the attack until Yamamoto gave the order to withdraw the Japanese fleet. Lots of smoke and fire and sinking ships.

In real life, the attack lasted about eight minutes and that's how long I thought this would take. But in the film, it was, of course, the centerpiece. And, because of that, they

Locking The Barn Door After The Cows Are Let Out Never Works

By Dan Rattiner

This past Wednesday, an Architectural Review Board in Southampton met with angry residents of the exclusive Quiogue section of Westhampton Beach to see if there was anything that could be done to halt the building of a new home by Tami and Gary Gross in their community. The Review Board could choose to help out or not to help out.

Tami and Gary Gross have bulldozed down one of the old houses in Quiogue — the enclave consists mostly of small, shingled, “cottage” style homes built in the 1880s — and have submitted plans to replace it with a much larger, brand new home in a faux style that will be three or four times the size of anything else in the neighborhood. This is America. You can build whatever the law says you can build. And in this case, there are no laws that say you cannot do this.

How Tami and Gary Gross will fare, I do not know, but there is little doubt that in our old communities there are enclaves of homes that deserve to be considered, as groups, for preservation. There are some places that are listed as historic districts, others that are on the state register of historic places. But there are many that have not been attended to because the proper paperwork has not been filed, and Quiogue is one of them.

The Quiogue Association wrote a letter to the Grosses. They used the phrase “sticking out like a sore thumb.” It has had no effect.

In most communities out here, there are laws defining the minimum size that a home can be. Nobody should build anything smaller than 800 square feet. It's the law. But nobody thought about laws putting a maximum size on a house. In Sagaponack, Ira Rennert got approval for, and is building, a house that will be 110,000 square feet. He's been building it for six years. The town has since passed a law making the maximum size of a house 20,000 square feet, but it won't stop the existing construction.

Only a half a mile away, also in Sagaponack, a man built a home that was not over-size, but which had reflective, corrugated, stainless steel for siding all around. On a sunny day it used artistic license and stretched it out. I watched the scenes with the nurses in the Navy hospital with the windows getting blown out, the sailors in the nearby barracks running around, the officers screaming at each other in the Officer's Club, the ships on fire and sinking, the Japanese pilots giving the thumbs up, and the Japanese messengers running from the Morse Code room up to the bridge with the messages for Admiral Yamamoto. There were also two American pilots who were able to get to their airplanes, fortuitously parked at a nearby dirt airstrip, and take them up for a dogfight with the Zeros. And there was the scene with President Roosevelt on the phone in Washington, a look of pain on his face, and there was the scene of Secretary of State Seward telling a Japanese embassy official to get out of his office. All in all, it was a rewarding five minutes, er, forty minutes. Without meaning to, I had run on the treadmill for forty-two minutes, a personal best.

I ate a huge breakfast. I was famished. My body felt good. No injuries from the long workout. So I went to the office. An hour later, our entire computer system went down, shutting off the communications of thirty employees on a deadline to get the newspaper put together. Hysteria reigned. I had thought I might have time to take a little nap in the late morning, sitting in a club chair in my office I use for that purpose, but with the crisis going on, I was fully engaged.

The crisis was still going on at three fifteen in the afternoon. We were in touch with half a dozen cable companies, web providers, software experts and computer repair people and we were closing in on the problem, but we weren't quite there yet. I hadn't eaten any lunch. But I still felt great.

At this point, I came to the conclusion that the problem was finally going to be solved, and I suddenly felt this huge wave of exhaustion come over me. It was 3:45 p.m.

"You'd better go home," somebody said.

And so I did. I drove slowly, fighting sleep and trying not to weave all over the road. I made myself imagine collapsing on the living room sofa as soon as I got home. And I arrived safely. But when I got in the front door, I was awake again and all I could do was pace and keep calling the office. Finally, I decided to trick myself. I'd lie down on the sofa with three publications. I'd open the New York Times and read that, and if I finished, I'd have the New Yorker on a table next to me to read, and if I finished that, I'd have a copy of a John Grisham book to get into next.

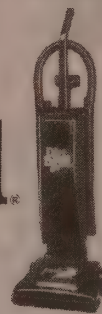

The last thing I remember was my two dogs jumping up and wedging themselves in somewhere between me and the sofa pillows. When I woke up it was dark, and it took me awhile to figure out where I was.

I am blaming all of this on Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto.

GEORGE DOES WHAT?

Rumor has it that I've been doing it all over the east end for years.

Well, it's true and I'm proud of it.

I never kept it a secret.

Kazdin Pools always did much more than just build award winning pools and spas.

I really get upset, when I hear, "George, I knew you built Mrs. So and so's gunite pool. I didn't know you also did vinyl."

We do. We always did.

We build any shape gunite or vinyl pools and any spa you can think of.

We maintain them and when they start to wear, we renovate them.

Customers are always coming to our retail location, chatting, buying chemicals and pool toys. Having their pool water tested free.

I guess some people just won't understand that we can also put the entire package together.

At very competitive prices.

Pools. Spas. Lighting. Patios and Decks. Landscaping. Repairs and Maintenance. We do it all and we're going to keep doing it.

Sorry

On Behalf Of Everybody Who Can't Live Up To The Standards Of President Bush

By Dan Rattiner

I would like, on behalf of all Americans, to apologize to our President, George W. Bush, for failing to live up to Mr. Bush's vision of what it means to be an American.

Americans are the greatest people in the world. With our Constitution, our democracy, our rule of law and our superior technology, we are the greatest people on earth. It is why we Americans can do what we do. Which is spread the word, so others can join us in enjoying the American way of life.

Among those I would like to apologize for, first of all, are the executives of Haliburton, who from time to time have overcharged the American taxpayer for the work they have been hired to do in Iraq.

I would like to apologize for the CIA and the FBI, who failed to have the courage to tell Mr. Bush that their agents could not find any evidence of Weapons of Mass Destruction in Iraq and instead wrote reports that there were people who knew people who knew other people who could find them.

I would like to apologize to the President for the behavior of Howard Stern, Janet Jackson and the purveyors of cable TV and other media who think it is okay to say a dirty word, or expose a part of the human anatomy that should remain covered, or otherwise behave in ways that are counter to the Ten Commandments as written by the maker. Those that carry on in this way, especially in front of children, should be fined, punished and time delayed and beeped. That is not the way an American behaves.

I would like to apologize for the behavior of documentary filmmaker Michael Moore.

I would like to apologize to the President for the behavior of those who believe in a Woman's Choice, or in Same Sex Marriage. These are folks who have wandered from the right path and need to be brought back to the way of righteousness. They are letting you

MEET THE WRITERS AT SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE

By John Capone

In the interest of full disclosure, I must disclose something. This, the 27th annual John Steinbeck "Meet the Writers" Book Fair, was not the first I've attended. The first, two years ago during my first year in Southampton College's MFA writing program, ended badly. There were obscenities shouted in the streets of Bridgehampton, a white suit completely stained with red wine and sculptures in the garden of the Elaine Benson Gallery swung off of. That was the last time the Book Fair was held there, but that's not why.

Last year, for the first time, the Book Fair was held on the campus of Southampton College, whose John Steinbeck Project the event contributes to, and it was, by all accounts, a smashing success. The $35,000 raised at the 26th annual Book Fair was the highest total yet. Over the years, the funds have been used toward awards and scholarships for writing students, acquisitions for the library and the establishment of the library's Steinbeck Writing Room, though room might be too strong a word. But it does have carpet.

Before last year's Book Fair, my roommate received a mysterious phone call from one of our professors who organizes the event. He's a fair man, measured in tone and substance, but blinds everybody in the neighborhood, and the heat it gives off is terrific. We're talking, frying pan hot. But there were no laws in effect saying you couldn't use this material.

The year after this house was completed, the next door neighbor bailed out, selling his home for a song to somebody who had the idea of planting twenty foot evergreens on the property line to block the corrugated siding's effects. The sun's reflection simply burnt all the leaves off these trees. The new next-door neighbor just hadn't thought it through.

In addition to laws or rules that can be put into effect to restrict buildings in certain districts, there are also laws and rules that can be put into effect to prevent the wholesale cutting down of trees, the bulldozing of forests, and even, where it might be appropriate, dictating the colors that things can be painted. (On Nantucket, there are only certain colors that may be used in painting houses.)

You don't have to be an official village or town to pass laws restricting what can be built. You can do it as an enclave or association. Here are a few sections that I think ought to have restrictions. Things that are historic, all built at once long ago, include the Association Homes in Montauk, the Springs "downtown" district, the estate area adjacent to the Maidstone Club in East Hampton, the area surrounding the Town Green in East Hampton, Sagg Main, the Fordune community in Water Mill, the Georgica Association in Wainscott, the estate section behind Hill Street in Southampton, Gin Lane in Southampton, the Murray Compound in Southampton, the Art Village in Southampton, the Village of Shelter Island Heights, Jobs Lane, Southampton, downtown Westhampton Beach, the downtown of Quogue, Remsenberg, many others.

People who live in what they believe is a historically sensitive area should get together to form groups and take action as soon as possible. Because people buying in need to know what they are getting into. And if there is nothing to be getting into, then they are free to build what they please. • when it comes to making a point clearly, he makes Donald Rumsfeld look like the Associated Press. After five minutes of extended pleasantries my roommate had to ask him, "What the hell do you want from me?" After a few more minutes of labyrinthine lexical holding patterns, the word was finally out that this event was not to be a repeat of the year before. The event thus went smoothly, nothing was broken, and as I said before, more money was raised.

This year, the Steinbeck Award was given to Robert Caro. He has a Pulitzer and a National Book Award, but this had to be at least as big a thrill as receiving a Stubby from George Plimpton two summers ago at a fundraiser for Hampton Shorts. It thrilled him so, that he was unfortunately unable to attend. Word is that he was sick in the hospital and we wish him a speedy recovery. His wife, Ina Caro, accepted the award for him and delivered an eloquent speech.

This year there were ninety-nine authors at the Book Fair, and Southampton Provost Daniel Rodas referred to them as "ninety-nine bottles of beer on the wall." They were arrayed about the tent like barkers at a tradeshow, only this year, we were hoping that they'd be selling some wit. As my associates and I walked through the tent, we couldn't help wondering,

"Who are all these people, where do they come from and what do they want?"

We came filled with questions. Who calls this event the unofficial kick-off of the summer season? That one was easy: the Southampton College PR department. Where is the Steinbeck Writer's room? Why do writers need a room? Is it to sleep in while they're living on the street collecting rejection letters? We might not have learned the answers to all these questions, but we did learn some things we hadn't expected. For instance, Sandra Senzon, author of Reversing Gum Disease Naturally, has a cat name Princeton who appeared in Meet the

Kimberly back doing what she likes to do

Benson

Legendary Art Gallery Reopens In Bridgehampton This Week

By Marion Wolberg Weiss

The sun was desperately trying to make its way through the clouds as Kimberly Goff was readying the Elaine Benson Gallery for the season's opening after being on a one year "hiatus." No matter. Spring was here, and the trees were flowering anyway. A sense of renewal permeated the air: both the Gallery and the season were coming alive after a difficult interim.

A man was combing through the stone pebbles that surrounded the Sculpture Garden; an exhibiting artist, Teru Simon, was arriving with her work. Pieces of art lay on the various gallery floors, waiting to be hung. A black and orange butterfly hovered nearby.

If truth be told, Ms. Goff is experiencing her own restoration as well, a difficult task since the death of her mother, Elaine Benson, five years ago. It's apparent not only in her serene demeanor and sophisticated dress, but also in her actions.

Despite having a bad cold, Ms. Goff was here and there and everywhere: simultaneously directing a crew carrying Ms. Simon's three dimensional pieces, talking to Ms. Simon and her helpers, dealing with a potential electrical problem and hanging Grace Sutton's work according to the artist's illustrated instructions. Oh, yes. She was also conversing with her companion, Owain Hughes, deciding when she'd be home to consume his chicken soup, the perfect recipe for a cold.

Regardless of the energy afoot and the fact that she was paying a little more attention to her own well-being for a change, this is a light every Friday before an opening. An opening at the Gallery was a big event. Cars were lined up for what seemed like miles on Montauk Highway. Thank goodness our neighbors took it all in stride. After all, we're part of the community.

"But things are different now. I don't have many helpers. So I allow an extra day for labeling and putting on the final touches when preparing for a show. And I'm not having as many benefits this year." Why the changes? "Basically I was wearing myself out," Ms. Goff answers without hesitation.

One aspect that hasn't changed, however, is the idea that a Hamptons' gallery director is often a "one-man band." "I have to be a curator, a photographer, a P.R. person, a business executive, a salesperson, everything," Ms. Goff remarks without bitterness. "I also have to be physically strong to carry the art work," she adds with a small smile. "I work out every day when I can."

There's a pause. "I also have to pick up one hundred cigarette butts after an opening." This time, Ms. Goff laughs heartily at the thought.

Ms. Goff continues. "My mother made me a partner in the Gallery and taught me every-down.

I would like to apologize to the President for the behavior of Donald Rumsfeld, who knew about the investigations of abuse of Iraqi prisoners by our military last January, but failed to bring it to your attention. I apologize for him. Please forgive him.

I would like to apologize to the President for the behavior of the French, the Germans and the Russians at the United Nations, who opposed America's determination to go to war to relieve Saddam Hussein of the command of those long suffering Iraqis who yearned to be free. Those United Nations members were particularly ungrateful, it seemed, considering how America came to save them during the Second World War. Well, all of them except the Germans anyway.

I would like to apologize for all the environmentalists, who seem not to realize that their behavior stands in the way of American progress.

I would like to apologize for the behavior of the Iraqi people, who don't seem to realize how much better off they are, and will be when they can enjoy the sorts of things that Americans do that will make them great.

And I would like to apologize to President

Bush on behalf of those American scientists, who recently wrote that protest letter to Mr. Bush objecting to the cavalier treatment of scientific information they provide him that does not re-enforce the beliefs of what it means to be an American.

On behalf of all of the above, and all of those so-called Americans I have missed who can not measure up to the standards of President Bush's America, I sincerely apologize and declare that all of us, every one of us, will simply have to go back to square one and think this through and get it right, which I'm sure we will. We are all Americans, after all.

Five Year Olds In Eastport Interpret The Meaning Of Mother's Day

By Janet Berg

"I've been teaching here for 34 years," Mrs. Pantaleo said, who's like a mom to the kids. "Sometimes I feel like 'The old teacher who lived in the shoe, and had so many children, she didn't know what to do.'"

Q: WHY DO WE CELEBRATE MOTHER'S DAY?

MORGAN: "I know, Mrs. Bird, 'cause we can't ever forget how special she is."

Q: WHEN WAS THE FIRST MOTHER'S DAY?

TAYLOR: "The very first Mother's Day was the second year of the world. NOT the first, 'cause it takes a while to think about it, so the next year they put it together."

"Oh," I responded. "And who is 'they'?"

TAYLOR: "President George Washington thought of it."

ZACHARY: "No, it was Abe Lincoln."

Q: DID YOU GO ANYWHERE ON MOTHER'S DAY?

CARLIE: Lake George.

ELIZABETH: "Carlie, me too. I went to Lake

George, too." (What a coincidence, I tell them).

MATTHEW says, seriously, "MY mom likes to go to The Red Lobster, but we can't find one."

ALEX suggested: "How about the Orange Lobster?"

ALYSSA: "Mom likes to go shopping at the

She just had puppies. I named one Banana and one Apple and . . . I have an old kitty, too, named "Yellow," 'cause the cat's scared of the dogs. All eight pets sleep in my room, and we're getting the daddy dog, too."

"What kind of a dog is it?" I ask.

ELIZABETH: "A LABRA-DOG."

ALYSSA: "I had fun with my mom and Mason and Gunner in the pool at Disney World. Then we got too cold, so we went in the hot tub, but then we got too hot, so we went in the pool, but then, we got too cold and we went back in the hot tub, and then . . ."

LOGAN: When we went to Washington D.C. and we saw the President's backyard. It was a white house and had a lot of garbage. I saw a straw, maybe it was his."

Q: WHAT IS ONE THING YOUR MOM CAN DO THAT YOUR DAD CAN'T?

PHILIP: "She drives faster than my dad."

LORI ANN: "My mom can cook and my dad can't."

TAYLOR: "My mom can have babies and my stores and Dad likes to sit on the bench."

Q: WHAT WOULD YOU LIKE TO TELL ME ABOUT YOU AND YOUR MOM?

ALEXIS: "Once, she fell down the stairs with my brother, walking up backwards."

ELIZABETH: "My mom loves to play with me and the dogs. And my dog is a Mommy, too."

Parents.

Our fearless crew went out into the mix of writers, journalists and hangers-on in search of answers. I was cautioned to be careful by one woman who told me, "There are many New York Times writers who were arrested because they said they were there when they weren't."

Harvey Shapiro, who edited the anthology the Poets of World War II, had the no nonsense and humble answer that he was chosen for the project because, "I'm a poet who served in the Second World War." And then quipped, "There are not too many left." He's a renowned poet, who has also served as the editor of The New York Times Book Review. At the Book Fair he was wearing a Yankees hat, but when asked about this, to his great credit he claimed to be a Giants fan, and that he had just found the hat.

I had to go clear my head for a moment and escape the noise. My associates and I left the big tent, but soon returned in search of James Brady, the conservative chronicler of Jarhead jargon and Hamptons life, just not in the same novel. Although, down the line we can envision a crossover book coming from Mr. Brady; something like The Marines that Ate Gin Lane, or The Battle for Guild Hall. Unfortunately, we arrived at his table only to find that he was an early departure. We asked his next-table-neighbor, Max Brooks, if Brady would be returning. He shrugged and said, "When a marine leaves the field, he's gone."

We found out, however, that Max Brooks, author of The Zombie Survival Guide (it is what it sounds like it is, but very, very funny) worked on the recent remake of Dawn of the Dead. He was called on to provide commentary for the DVD and interviewed for the website. The principle difference between the 70s version and the current one, Mr. Brooks says, is that the zombie bait has gotten hotter. Max Brooks was then kind enough to pose with our whole band of traveling miscreants for a photo.

After consulting with my cameraman, who had failed me yet again, I had the opportunity to share a brief moment of respite with old-school journalist Kennett Love, a staunch supporter of Dava Sobel. Mr. Love seemed a true gentleman, dapper and dandy, just the sort you'd hope to share a bench with while lizard-people paraded all around.

Our search for the American dream brought us to Kaylie Jones, Southampton College professor and author of A Soldier's Daughter Never Cries, who reminded us that "This is about helping young writers, and not about tooting our own horns. We don't get any sales from this."

Nearby was D. Daniel Judson, author of The Poisoned Rose, The Bone Orchard and the soon to be released The Gin Palace, a series of novels set in Southampton featuring private eye Declan MacManus. He told us he had sold out of all his books. He's a Southampton College alumnus who has been nominated for a Barry Award and a Shamus Award for his fiction, offering those young writers in the program now struggling a ray of hope. He also has some really cool tattoos. Also giving young writer's hope for the future was Peter Mahken, recipient of a student Steinbeck award for poetry, who outdid all the professional writers with the wittiest comment of the day.

We discovered two revelers, Mike and Trisha, from the USGA, who seemed to have just wandered across the street over the new pedestrian overpass from the U.S. Open site and crashed the Book Fair. While they claimed they had tickets, they could produce none. Trisha bore an uncanny resemblance to Lisa Loeb, so uncanny in fact, that my colleague Mr. Platt serenaded her with his off-key rendition of "You Say." The only information we uncovered from these two was that Bill Murray might or might not show at Shinnecock this year.

I left the fair unsure as to the state of contemporary literature. I had wanted to discuss my misgivings with Nelson DeMille, but he was nowhere to be found. Why I felt so uneasy was made quite clear to me by an incident later on in a local bookstore. While I was reading B.R. Meyers' A Readers Manifesto, a diatribe on the current state of American literary prose, an enlightening thing happened. I was reading a passage in which Meyers and L.A. Times critic Lee Seigel were trading printed barbs about the tautology in one particular sentence in Cormac McCarthy's All the Pretty Horses, when across the store a woman with a shrill voice became indignant that her mother had slighted The Devil Wears Prada. "It's really good," she squealed. I realized any debate such as Myers' is nearly irrelevant and absurd in today's climate. Every couple of years the New York Times Book Review loses a page or two, and People magazine gets a page or two fatter. All points about the beast are rendered moot when the beast is dead. Or being devoured by People magazine.

JAMES T: "When my dad puts me to bed and plays a little, I never want him to leave."

Q: WHAT IS MOM'S HARDEST JOB?

JAMES M: "Holding her temper."

Q: WHAT ELSE DO YOU WISH YOUR MOM WOULD DO FOR YOU?

TAYLOR: I wish she'd build me a tree house, but she can't use a hammer."

Q: DO ANY OF YOUR MOM'S HAVE A NICKNAME?

MARISSA: "Mommy."

GIANA: "Honey Buns."

ALYSSA: "Dad calls my mom Sam."

OH, WHAT'S HER REAL NAME? I asked.

ALYSSA: "Sam."

Q: HOW WOULD YOU FINISH THIS SENTENCE: "I CAN'T BELIEVE THE TIME MY MOM ..."

ELIZABETH: "The time my mom got the puppy out of my dog's stomach!"

Q: WHAT DO YOU DO FOR YOUR MOM ON MOTHER'S DAY?

GIANA: "Make her French toast breakfast with two bumps, like this (shows me with her hands) into Mickey Mouse ears."

LAUREN: "I'd like to cook my mom some tea and boiled eggs."

BRANDON: "I get three eggs out of the refrigerator, crack them, drip them in a bowl and ..." (he hesitates and Giana mimics stirring with a spoon) "AND stir it," (he looks at her, sideways), "Put the bowl over a fire, but I don't know how high to put the fire on" (he looks worried), "cause if I do too much, it might blow up ... No, I don't think I'm gonna make the eggs, 'cause it's too hard!"

NICK: "I know how to make chicken dinner. You put it inside the sink ... and then, you go somewhere, and when you come back, it's a chicken. You chop it up, and take the skin off, and put it on warm in oven for three minutes and then serve it on the table."

JAMES M: "It's EASY, Mrs. BUG. You go to the pizza store."

It's a new yellow vacuum, but it's a bad one, 'cause I used to like to ride on the back of it, but now I'm too heavy. And it was hot out, so I fanned my mom and let her sleep."

BREAKING NEWS

Willie Nelson will undergo surgery for carpal tunnel syndrome, a problem that causes tendons or ligaments in the wrist to become aggravated and enlarged. Apparently, he was in so much pain that he couldn't finish a show in Las Vegas on Saturday. He has had to cancel concerts for the next two months, including the much anticipated benefit performance at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. No one else has been scheduled to fill in the slot, though WHBPAC is in the process of trying to find a replacement. The 71-year old Willie Nelson leaves some big boots to fill.

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

The Last Resorts, by Cleveland Amory, discusses the bluebloods of Southampton, Tuxedo Park, Newport, Palm Beach and other resorts. Published in 1948 by Harpers, it gives a good description of post-war Southampton in the 1940s.

The Last Resorts By Cleveland Amory

"Southampton has the strongest air in the world," says Mrs. Livingston. "It's the suction, you know. You feel it the minute you leave Westhampton."

If the resorters are stern on the subjects of simplicity and health, they are even sterner on the subject of their resort's history. They are certain that their resort is the only one with a history which is "really interesting," as they put it, and they identify themselves, through their various Historical Societies and Village Improvement Societies, back to the very dawn of American history itself. Although in certain cases this identification has been difficult to prove – Newport's claim that its Old Stone Mill was built by the Vikings is the outstanding example – the claims continue nevertheless. Mrs. Henry G. Trevor of "The Snuggery," as her room in her Southampton cottage was called, went so far as to write the history of every piece of furniture in her cottage. Writing on a more general subject, in her typewritten scrapbook entitled Memories of a Southampton Child, she declared "We owe a debt to the first cottage colonists at Southampton... No trolley or bus or Merry-go-Round or any form of commercialism was sanctioned by them. Imagine if our roads (First Neck Lane, Job's Lane, Captain's Neck Lane, Ox Pasture Road, Toylsome Lane, Gin Lane, Meeting House Lane, etc.) had been rechristened Sea View Avenue or Ocean Boulevard!" Finally, if all else fails, resorters will invariably discuss the age of their golf course; at each resort the course is, if not the oldest in the world – St. Andrews in Scotland is generously accorded that honor – then the oldest in this country. Failing that, each resort's golf course is always the second oldest, and, failing that, then at least the second oldest continuously operating eighteen holes in the same territory with no women allowed on Sunday. Near the Greenbrier at White Sulphur Springs resorters make no claims for any one course; in the area near one of their courses, however, they claim the game was first played. The Homestead at Virginia Hot Springs, in turn, claims the country's oldest continuously operating tee. Saratoga, which claims only the country's third oldest continuously operating golf course, makes up for this by claiming the country's oldest continuously operating race track – continuously operating except, of course, in World War II.

Actually golf was derived from the Dutch word kolf, meaning "club" or "stick". It was first imported from Holland and played in the New Netherlands so ferociously that authorities forbade it "within thickly settled areas." Dying out in that warlike form, the game was later revived along the more peaceful Scotch lines with Charleston, South Carolina, taking the honors for having the first recorded golf club and clubhouse, on Harleston's Green, as far back as 1795. The first American golf club in the modern sense was the St. Andrews Club of Yonkers, New York, which was established in 1888, the name Yonkers being conveniently forgotten by resorters who think only in terms of the Scottish St. Andrews. Mrs. Trevor's memory book, on the subject of golf at Southampton, is typical of the scene which in the early 1890s was being enacted at virtually all the major social resorts:

The climax in Southampton's growth and the reason for its change from a simple country place to a fashionable resort was the discovery that the Shinnecock Hills was a naturally ideal golf links. Edward Spencer Meade, returning from a winter spent in Pau, described a game called Golf, which he said should be pronounced "Goff." He was founder and first president of the club. Stanford White designed the clubhouse. The members all had scarlet coats and the insignia of the club on the brass buttons. The small Shinnecock Indian boys were trained as caddies and a Scotch professional was imported to teach the members. Saturday afternoon all thing about the business during the three years before her death. She made me make decisions, from little ones to big ones, and would often defer to me.

"In the end, she would always defer to me. It was difficult yet somehow I did it. I've said it before, but it wasn't easy stepping into my mother's shoes."

Running a gallery was not an easy matter either for her mother and her husband, Emanuel, when they arrived here in the summer of 1965, first living and showing art on the property now coincidentally occupied by Dan Rattiner, Dan's Paper's Editor in Chief. After that first summer, the couple moved to the present Bridgehampton house, exhibiting in their residence.

In 1967, Ms. Benson restored the outbuildings to operate as gallery space which they have for all these years. Not only has the Gallery thrived during its thirty-nine years of existence, but also its physical configuration with its multiple spaces has made it a well-known venue.

In the early years (and coincidentally once again) the office of Dan's Papers was next door to the Gallery. Ms. Goff recalls those times: "I was a teenager, and I remember always going over to the paper and hanging out. I would even babysit for Dan's two children, Maya and Adam. We've had a long relationship with the publication and Dan. Mom wrote for the paper and was made 'Faculty Advisor.' She's still listed on the masthead in that capacity."

What's also a continuing aspect of the Gallery is its egalitarian attitude. "Mom never wanted to establish the Gallery as an exclusive place, even though over the years many famous artists have exhibited including Larry Rivers, Alfonso Ossorio and Jimmy Ernst. She wanted to give emerging artists a chance, artists of diverse ages, backgrounds and culture."

The first show for the season, "3-D," will carry on this tradition, with both emerging and established artists displaying their work. As usual, there will be diverse media represented, like ceramics, sculptures and paintings. As usual there will be a huge, festive opening.

And there will be Kimberly Goff at the helm, looking renewed and comfortable as the Gallery itself.

And we bet that the sun will definitely be shining that day.

The exhibit, "3-D," will be on view at the Elaine Benson Gallery (2317 Montauk Highway) until May 31. The opening is May 15 from 4-7 p.m. A preview benefit for Group for the South Fork is on Friday, May 14 from 5:30-7:30 p.m.

Southampton would gaze admiringly at each contestant as they "drove off" from the first tee. Woe betide them if they fozzled the ball. Once Mr. Walker Breese was playing and the professional told him he must keep his eye on the ball, and as he had one glass eye he took it out and placed it on top of the ball.

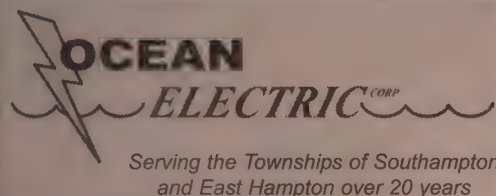

Another severe point of pride which all resorters share in common is their claim to like their particular resort best, not during the regular season but only during the off season when, apparently, only the "real Newporters" or the "real Bar Harborites," are present. This leads, of course, to a corollary to this point of pride – the love of the native. In the old days, while a few distinguished natives were cherished – such as Old Foley, Bar Harbor taxi driver, Old Pyrrhus, Southampton's Lake Agawam paddler, Old Eddie at the Lenox Club or Old Brooks at the Tuxedo Club – the natives in general were regarded as pretty terrible people who were always out, as the expression was, to "do" the resorters. In recent times, with the changing world outside and the new defensive attitude, resorters have come around to loving their natives dearly and have even attempted to provide a substitute for a word which they feel is too undemocratic. "I'm sorry," a Bar Harbor debutante recently told a prospective native beau,

"but I never go out with winter boys." Unhappily neither "winter boys" nor "year-round residents" nor several other expressions which have been tried have yet proved satisfactory; nonetheless the current affection is as remarkable as the old-time animosity. Even Palm Beach's famous fishing guide "murderer," a man who has dispatched his wife's boyfriend and two of his most irritating in-laws, has been regularly defended by the resort lawyer, Charles Francis Coe, and is now regarded as a grand fellow and as nice a one as anyone would care to meet. In some cases, notably at Southampton and Tuxedo, sons of distinguished old members are actually working in the resort clubs, side by side with the natives, in a paid capacity, and although these club staffs are not what they were in the Good Old Days – Southampton's Meadow Club, which once had a lady's maid for each lady visitor, is now down to one housekeeper – the camaraderie between native and resorter has never been higher. On their side the natives have endeavored to do their part to promote this era of good feeling, and era which reached its peak following

World War II when Bar Harbor's Shirley Liscomb summoned his caddies at the Kebo Valley Club and delivered a short speech. "It has been years," he said, in an address which warmed the hearts of all resorters, "since anyone looked aggressively for a golf ball."

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander # 298

Sometimes love is a fluke...

5/6/04 SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) - "A woman was arrested on accusations she used a mounted fish with a pointy nose to assault her live-in boyfriend, police said. A state police trooper responded Monday to a domestic dispute and found a 25-year-old man who claimed he was the victim of a knife assault. The man had several small cuts on his arms, right leg and left shoulder. The woman had a different story. She said the man threw her down and hit her several times. That's when she grabbed the fish.

"She could not get away, so she grabbed a decorative fish off the mantle of the fireplace and hit him several times until he let her go, the police report said."

This story is so ludicrous, I can hardly stand it! Obviously, Saginaw is a landlocked town. A Shelter Island woman would never grab a wall-mounted fish to hit her man. What's the point of destroying a perfectly good wall decoration, when excellent pescal weaponry is only as far away as the fridge?

When cleaning fish, always leave the tails on. Why? Because it's nature's handle. Nothing is more effective for getting your man's attention than grabbing a cleaned fish by the tail and slapping him across the face with it. You can get in several good side to side slaps before he knows what hit him! And you know he won't call the police and report that he was hit with a flounder, fluke or whatever, so that eliminates all those bothersome seafood restraining orders.

If you are fortunate enough to have a bonita or blue fish in the house, you can really make your mark. A chilled 3 pound blue or bonita on the back of his head will knock the remote right out of his hand. A semi-frozen blue or bonita is as good as a blackjack and a frozen one is as good as a club to knock him clean out for an hour, during which time you can defrost and bake the evidence. Have a nice dinner on the table by the time your man wakes up and act like nothing happened, works every time. You get out your anger, he gets a nap and you have a nice dinner, so what's not to like?

Frozen fish sticks can be thrown from the patio as he goes by on the mower. He'll think a stone hit him. It allows a woman to get out all that frustration without bothering the man to engage in emotional and meaningful conversation. I think most men would rather face a whole bag of frozen fish sticks than a hour of emotional conversation with an emotional woman.

If a woman is truly angry, absolutely nothing works better than dropping a live crab or lobster down the front of his pants as he's yelling. His rage turns instantly to pathetic fear and panic as he is distracted from his tirade by the thought of an impending vasectomy. It's very easy to grab his wallet from his back pocket as he's yanking his pants down. You can take cash and credit cards out of his wallet right in front of him, but all he can think about is that lobster. It's absolutely amazing.

Many island men keep a crabnet handy in the house in case of feminine emotional outbursts. When they hear the love of their life crying, screaming, swearing, ripping the cabinets off the wall, hurling laundry and such, many put some chocolates in the net, hide halfway behind a door, and slowly extend the crabnet toward their beloved. If it returns with the net torn, frame bent or whole net snapped off, island men leave the house quickly and quietly.

They go to the Dory, where they find other men with destroyed crabnets. They sit and discuss strategies for getting back in the house without having to get into a big discussion with her. There's no need for a discussion anyway, since the men already know it's their fault. It's something they always do that they should never do, or something that they never do that they should always do. So, knowing this, the men just try to develop an apology strategy that will get them home with the least amount of time and money spent. Guys know that while they are figuring out where they can get flowers and presents to get them out of this jam, she is preparing a fish for their faces. One by one, they file out of the Dory and head home. Landlocked men have to stand and face the music, but men by the sea have to stand and face the flounder.

Benchmark Event Charts The Progress Of The LI Wine Industry

It's hard to believe that the Long Island wine industry is over thirty years old. It seems like only yesterday that a young couple planted some vitis vinifera vines and made history.

But it is equally hard to believe it is so young, having already produced some exceptional wines that have garnered global attention. And perhaps no annual wine event better illustrates where the industry has been and where it's going than "Windows on Long Island Wine," an annual benefit that showcases the best and brightest LI producers have to offer.

Though its namesake venue, Windows on the World, was lost to us in the tragedy of 9/11, "Windows on Long Island Wine" has remained one of the most anticipated food and LI wine events of the year, and this year it returned to Manhattan on Monday, May 3, at an exciting new downtown location, the elegant Capitale. Twenty-nine Long Island wineries were represented, their wares complimented by delicacies from over thirty celebrated restaurants and food purveyors. Proceeds from the event, as they have for the past two years, again went to Earth Pledge, a non-profit organization dedicated to encouraging sustainable agriculture and to promoting its products.

Kevin Zraly, noted author and founder of Windows on the World Wine School, chaired the event, and members of the host committee included Marvin Shanken of Wine Spectator magazine, Michael Lynne, owner of Bedell Cellars and Corey Creek Vineyards and co-chairman of New Line Cinema, Michael Aaron of Sherry Lehmann, Alan Stillman of Smith & Wolensky, and Julian Niccolini of the Four Seasons. Over 64 VIP tickets and 420 Grand Tasting tickets were sold, making this year's event one of the largest in terms of ticket purchases. All told, about 900 people attended in one capacity or another.

Jane Baxter Lynn, the Long Island Wine Council's executive director, noted that this event provides an indication of the growth of our East End wine region: last year 23 wine producers were represented, this year 29. She went on to say that this growth is a perfect example of what the Wine Council's partnership with Earth Pledge is all about.

Vineyard owners and winemakers alike, such as Kip Bedell of Bedell Cellars, owner/winemaker Charles Massoud of Paumanok Vineyards, owner/winemaker Theresa Dilworth of Comtesse Thérèse, winemaker Vincent Nock of Macari Vineyards, owner Peter Carroll of Lenz Winery, and winemaker Adam Suprenant and owner Bud Kohler of Osprey's Dominion, poured from some of their best bottles. It was an incredible evening made even more so by the celebration of two stellar Long Island vintages: 2001 and 2002.

And just think... Our region, at thirty-one, is still in its infancy. Imagine the progress LI wines will make in another fifty years! The future does indeed look bright, not only for our young industry, but also for all those whose efforts make the creation of Long Island wine possible. Cheers.

Big Event of the Week

Tell Me About It At The Vail-Leavitt: Saturday And Sunday, May 15-16

L-R: Marilee Scheer of Laurel, Toni Munna of Riverhead, Therese Whelan and Ruby Honerkamp of East Hampton, and Tom Donohue of Southampton rehearse a scene from The River Theatre Company's world premiere of Tell Me About It, by Lisa Reitman-Dobi of Water Mill.

Tell Me About It, a new play by Lisa Reitman-Dobi of Water Mill, centers on David, the youngest child of an American father and a Polish-born, Jewish mother who emigrated to the United States during World War II. Using fast-paced dialogue and humor, the play explores David's journey as he writes about his mother's life before she emigrated to this country, which leads him to the truth about her experiences in war-torn Europe. Tell Me About It draws audiences in with humor, then grips them with potent, inspiring scenes.

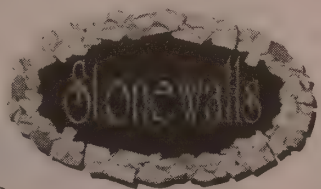

The show, produced by Stacy Dermont and directed by Serena Seacat – who brought last year's critically acclaimed production of Agnes of God to life at the Vail – is a powerful yet hilarious piece of work by the newly formed River Theater Company.

Performances will continue at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall, located on Peconic Avenue in downtown Riverhead, on Thursday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. through May 23. Tickets are $18 general admission, $15 for students, seniors, and vets. Discounts available for groups of 10 or more. Call 631-369-4661. Tickets are also available at the Blue Door Gallery, 40 E. Main Street, Riverhead (208-8166), and at the East End Arts Council, 133 East Main Street, Riverhead (727-0900).

RESTAURANT AT THE WOODS

From the NY Times, Mrs. JoAnne Starkey says:

"Mr. Guy Peuch's crab cakes are legendary, perhaps the best on Long Island."

From Newsday, Mr. Peter Gianotti says:

"It's easily the most impressive restaurant to open in Riverhead since potatoes began giving way to grapes! Excellent main course; pork chop finishes with nubbins of garlic and sage. Also first rate, the Niman Ranch dry-rubbed rib steak. Top desserts: lemon tart, tart tatin and chocolate-hazelnut puck."

From Dan's Papers, Mr. Roy Bradbrook says:

"Probably the best lobster bisque we have ever tasted; pate with pistachio and truffles was superb, vibrant duck a l'orange with some incredible wild rice, impressive desserts. Guy Feuch is among the very top tier chefs in this region."

North Fork Critics' Choice 2003 Winners

—Mattituck To Greenport—

And The Winner Is...

I think it is safe to say that Dan's Papers annual Best of the Best contest has indeed achieved institution status on the East End, and while we all know it's not who wins or loses, it's still a lot more fun to win. And speaking of winners, 2003's lucky award recipients are spotlighted below. Just look for the designation at the end of each restaurant description, and follow the key to find out who won what. The list is impressive, but then so are today's dining options here on the North Fork.

La Cuvée Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,Wi]

La Cuvée Wine Bar And Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel

Red Door. A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef / owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brulee and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees – $16–$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03). [D]

The Shady Lady Restaurant. The Zorn family's vision of stately elegance comes to the North Fork in this grandly unique dining room. Two rooms actually, with dinner jackets de rigueur in the Scarlet Room and a more casual ambience pervading the lodge-like Pine Room. The menu keeps apace with the opulence of the surroundings. Chef Ross Essner's cosmopolitan cooking style is globally savvy, but local-ingredient particular. Especially breathtaking is the lobster risotto with diver scallop and asparagus. A superb cheese plate complements the dessert choices and the wines are as excellently-chosen as they are reasonably-priced. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrees, $28-$38. (Bradbrook, 7/18/03). {A,Cu,Ser,Spe,W}

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). [L,O]

theatre reviews: assassins & blackbird... by gordin & christiano

Stephen Sondheim's Assassins has been given a stylish revival by the Roundabout Theater Company at Studio 54. The controversial musical with a rather minimal book by John Weidman has received seven Tony Award nominations, as well as seven Drama Desk Award nominations. Although it has been given an impressive staging and features an outstanding cast, the skimpy story that sentimentalizes Presidential killers or would-be Presidential killers lusting for recognition lacks any real conflict and prevents the evening from becoming anything more than a terrific hour and 45-minute-nine-Sondheim song cabaret performed without an intermission.

The show, which was first seen in 1991 as a Playwrights Horizons production with only three musicians, has been all gussied up and now boasts a full orchestra, haunting lighting (Jules Fisher and Peggy Eisenhauer), and an elaborate set design (Robert Brill) reminiscent of a shooting gallery just outside a Coney Island amusement park roller-coaster.

Here we meet the Proprietor, wonderfully played by Mark Kudisch, who lures the crazy sickos in the opening number with promises of fame by singing "Hey, fella; Feel like you're a failure? Feel misunderstood? C'mere and kill a president; Hit the Prez and win a prize." From here we meet the evening's cast of tormented lost souls and hear their self-pitying stories. The only conflict arises near the end when the ghost of John Wilkes Booth (in a beautifully etched portrayal by Michael Cerveris) persuades Lee Harvey Oswald (Neil Patrick Harris) to shoot President Kennedy instead of killing himself. What the musical seems to be telling us is that these disillusioned failures were motivated by the fame, so as not to be totally ignored by the world.

Stephen Sondheim has said that Assassins is his favorite musical, and indeed his compelling music with his haunting lyrics are, of course, the evening's real star. This is not Sondheim's best, but it is gloriously entertaining and passionately performed by the dynamic ensemble of actors, who would like you to believe that there is more substance here than actually exists. As theatre, the evening doesn't add up to much and unfortunately the handsome staging is nothing more than show-biz razzle-dazzle. However, in our current times of sensationalized media stories, the popularity of reality TV, and now the coming of Jerry Springer - The Opera, this cast of psychos couldn't be timelier.

At the Blue Heron Arts Center's little studio theatre, The Edge Theater Company is presenting the off-Broadway premiere of Adam Rapp's movingly poignant tale, Blackbird, which he has also directed. The play has received two Drama Desk Award

Nominations, outstanding actor in a drama for Paul Sparks and outstanding scenic design by Dave Korins.

Blackbird is a grim, yet compelling story set on Christmas Eve in a run-down hovel on Canal Street that displays an amazing warmth and sense of character. The two-character drama is a sad and touching love story about a 32-year-old Desert Storm veteran, Mr. Sparks delivers a shattering portrayal; and a 19-year-old heroin addict, realistically played by Mandy Siegfried.

Mr. Rapp is undeniably a gifted writer whose work bears watching. The play marks his fifth production in New York in recent years, and he has also been produced in London twice. In addition he has published five novels and he is currently in post production on his first feature film, Winter Passing, which will be released next fall.

Dave Korins has totally transformed the Blue Heron Studio Theatre's black box into a total environment. Truck on over for an uncompromising slice of life. You'll feel like a fly on the wall and catch some rising stars in the process.

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

VIRTUAL GALLERY AT RADIO FREE HAMPTONS

Virtual reality is slowly making headway in the Hamptons. For example, Darlene Charneco's piece in Guild Hall's Members Show uses the idea of virtual space as a theme. Sag Harbor's Radio Free Hamptons goes one step further with an entire exhibit devoted to virtual reality as an aesthetic technique.

What's intriguing is the fact that Executive Director Reggie Woolery is even trying this new concept at all, placing digital art on light boxes mounted to the wall. What's also interesting is the dynamics established between Mr. Woolery's contradictory displays: personal memorabilia, including post cards, street signs, and text books from yesteryear alongside mechanical computers and digital art.

The effect is subtle but meaningful, conveying a lot about Mr. Woolery and his diverse tastes and sensibilities. There are other effects, particularly concerning the exhibit itself, namely, perception.

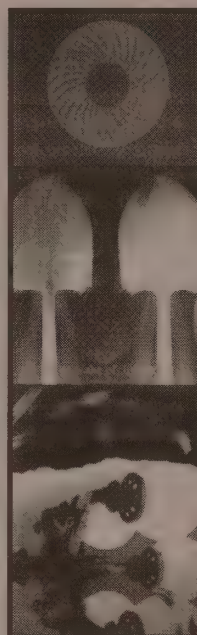

Let's consider first the concept of perception: the process by which we give meaning to just about everything. We know how differing perceptions of events or people can be dead- on or downright deceiving. (The airplanes crashing into the Twin Towers was initially perceived by some as a horrible accident or even an effective illusion.)

Such dissimilar reactions are guided by physiological factors: for example, our gender, state of mind or self-image. Past experiences also play a part, our past leading us to see the world in a way that is difficult to alter. Present feelings and circumstances can also establish our interpretations as well.

Even so, our first perception of the virtual gallery's art works by Scott Sandell and Paul Chojnowski was enlightening (both literal and figurative) with arresting shapes and colors attracting our attention, thus making the simple case that meaning is determined primarily by the senses.

What actually occurs in perception, however, is a more complex process and one that many people (including this critic) find hard to understand. For example, we can't perceive all the stimuli in our environment so we focus on and recall certain cues and ignore others. This is called selective attention and retention, respectively. Thus, certain shapes stand out in the works, like the shovels in one piece, probably because it represented a real object rather than an abstract one.

Next, we organize the stimuli, perhaps using a "figure - ground" configuration or a "closure" method. The art works seemed to lend themselves to a "similarity" principal, however: grouping elements together because they resemble each other in size, color, shape or other traits. We interpreted the works, therefore, as a lyrical homage to curves and circles, somehow recalling life forces (especially water, fire, and air).

Such is perception. What would abstract art be without it?

The show at Radio Free Hamptons (31 Long Island Ave., Sag Harbor) will be on view until May 15. Call for hours: 631-335 - 2062.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

I have got to stop going ga-ga over every young woman that comes along, in movies that is. Last week I wrote about Jennifer Garner as if my hair was ablaze and totally out of control – lit by her 13 Going On 30 enrapturing charm. Now, it's Lindsay Lohan bedazzling me and not doing a thing to douse the fire in my mind. Worse, the film she's in is a terrific one. Mean Girls has Ms. Lohan as Cady, a naïve, nice young lady coming to this country and entering a high school in the suburbs of Chicago, unprepared for the tween-teen, American rule book of combative engagement that separates the young from their innocence. Cady's rites of passage are a delight for tender-foot adults as well as the hard-nosed audience of her peers.

Done as an entertaining and educational series of vignettes on the hilariously amusing aspects of our weird and wacky ways that seem ordinary, the movie scratches off the veneer of our beautiful lives and reveals what's underneath – our frail humanity. This has been done by Tina Fey, the clever performer and dashing good head writer for Saturday Night Live. If you think that this film falls into the previous schlock teen comedies produced by SNL members, forget it! Producer Lorne Michaels needn't feel guilty about this one. Ms. Fey, who also performs in Mean Girls, has taken Rosalind Wiseman's book, Queen Bees and Wannabes, and filed down the claws enough to leave the flesh intact, following the autopsy done on the inter-relationships of young girls. Queen Bees is subtitled: Helping Your Daughter Survive Cliques, Gossip, Boyfriends and Other Realities of Adolescence, and Ms. Fey has taken all of the above and made a tangy gum-ball confection like the kind that implode in your mouth, as tart as carbolic acid and as sweet as 3 pounds of sugar. It spins the eyeballs in their sockets.

First on the list above, Cliques: There is the "Plastics," a pack of shrewish glamour queens who dominate the school with near-Osama Bin Laden tactics. Cady is perfect prey, being well-built and pound-foolish with eye makeup. The Plastics' queen is Regina, played with a perfect sting by Rachel McAdams. (Everyone in this cast is as close to A-One as is possible.) There's an arty group of fellow-out-of-the-loop students who want her as much. Poor Cady is overwhelmed. The art-flashy bunch, Lizzie Caplan and Daniel Franzese, especially use their outsider status to convince Cady to join the Plastics and spy on them. The better to learn all the dirt and use it to undo them. Cady becomes a Plastic and soon really becomes a Plastic. Her fingers and mouth become as sharp as shattered glass, but oh well! As she puts it, "It's better to be in the Plastics and hate life."

The privileges of suburban ease incubate a cruel hatefulness that Mean Girls meaningfully dances around. Better kept in the schoolrooms where this particular comedy of activist feminism works best. Ms. Fey, in her role in Mean Girls as a sarcastic teacher, leaves class to mount a lecture platform. Wrong. The film's biting laughs speak and give the students "what for" a lot better.

Keep the flame up high, ladies.

music review: luma jazz trio

The high ceilings and sweeping curtains of Pacific East allowed the percussion jam of the Luma Jazz Trio to resonate through the restaurant on Saturday night. It was my second time seeing the group, and they were in top form. When I arrived, Ali Giangola had temporarily set aside his eight-string guitar to straddle a wooden box drum. His rhythm danced with the bongos of Jeff Marshall as saxophonist Dan Lauter ripped out the melody. The musicians played off of each other gloriously, and by the time they resumed their official positions of guitar, bass, and sax, I was entranced. I watched people emerge from the bathroom dancing. The shared soundtrack to our lives caused everyone in the restaurant to tap their feet. The Luma Jazz Trio is perfect for a dinner setting because you are able to enjoy the music in one of two ways: sometimes, I found myself resting my cheek on my hand, wine glass tilted, gaze fixed on the wandering fingers of Giangola, the precise hands of Marshall, or the puffed cheeks and joyful eyes of Lauter; other times, I was wrapped in conversation with my dinner company, and the only trace of a performance was found in the rhythmic tapping of my feet.

All three musicians played several instruments, adding depth and creativity to their already spontaneous performance. Several times when I did find myself captured by the music, I was impressed by the smooth transitions that gracefully switched the mood from soft to funky or the style from spacey to tight. The group managed to navigate through moods like my table navigated through conversation. When Dan Lauter first with his bongo playing. His hands seemed to coax the beat out from under the leather surface of the drum with skill, precision, and emotion.

After the performance I spoke with the musicians about their excellent ability to mesh, and they agreed that such a dynamic was rare even in their own musical lives. The group met about a year ago, and Lauter said that it has "been like this since the beginning... we just clicked." I commented on the spontaneity of the sound, and they confirmed that they "never play the same thing twice."

Personally, that improvisational ability is my favorite part of attending a live performance. I like to hear groups that play to the situation they are confronted with – not just a 4-minute radio song that sounds the same every time. It makes the audience feel like a part of the music. Luma Jazz Trio is a group that feels out the audience and plays to them. At the end of the performance, my table exploded into applause, and our wonderful waiter, Patrick, suggested they play an encore. We polished off the wine and Pacific East's homemade dulce de leche to a final funky freestyle of the Luma Jazz Trio, until next time.

—Emily J Weitz

picked up his tiny soprano saxophone I had to giggle, but the way he handled it so comfortably enticed me into the music, and I remembered that size doesn't matter.

Ali Giangola's eight-string guitar is a beautiful instrument that I've rarely seen in performance. In these eight strings, Giangola is able to create the sounds of both bass and guitar. Jeffrey Marshall grooved on the bass, but he struck me

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

Sorrel, one of the herbaceous herbs of spring and summer, has a delicious, if somewhat acidic, flavor. Its more familiar uses are in soups, salads and omelets, and one of the most classic dishes, salmon in sorrel sauce.

Sorrel leaves literally melt into a puree when heated in a pan with a little butter. A cupful of leaves can disappear into little more than a tablespoon or so. Sorrel sauce for the salmon scallop recipe below cooks in minutes. I recall the first time I had this extraordinary dish at the Troigros Restaurant in Roanne, France in the hands of the creative brothers Troigros, who understood the new freedom of the Nouvelle Cuisine.

The bitterness of dandelion leaves grown specifically for salads works well with the lemony sorrel and boiled potatoes. A bit of garlic, Dijon mustard and fragrant olive oil in the dressing harmonize with the deliciously tart flavors of the greens.

Sorrel is one of the easiest plants to grow and now is the time to plant a flat or two. Put them in a shady corner of your garden and, as the arrow-shaped leaves grow, cut older leaves back to ensure a steady supply of young leaves. When purchasing sorrel, buy at a local farmers' market and choose fresh leaves that are bright and smooth. Leaves wrapped in plastic can disintegrate from the moisture captured within. Fresh sorrel can be refrigerated for 2-3 days; use as soon as possible.

DANDELION AND SORREL SALAD WITH CROUTONS

Dandelion and sorrel are two plants that are cultivated for use in a salad. If you cannot find dandelion leaves, substitute curly endive (frisee).

Serves 4

1 large bunch fresh dandelion leaves or curly endive

1/4 pound young fresh sorrel leaves, stems removed

8 tiny new potatoes, scrubbed

2 cloves garlic, finely minced

1 teaspoon Dijon mustard

1 tablespoon red wine vinegar

Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

CROUTONS, preferably homemade*

1. Wash the greens separately in plenty of cold water. Spin dry in a salad spinner, then wrap in paper towels to absorb excess moisture.

2. Put potatoes in a saucepan of cold water to cover, cover pan and bring to the boil. Add 1-2 teaspoons of salt to the water and cook at a gentle boil for 15-16 minutes or until tender. Drain and keep warm.

3. Meanwhile, put the garlic, mustard, vinegar, salt and pepper in a large salad bowl and stir to mix. Gradually whisk in olive oil to make the dressing. Add the warm potatoes and carefully toss to coat in the dressing, then add the dandelion and sorrel leaves. Toss gently to coat well. Arrange croutons over top of the salad and serve.

*The croutons: Cut day-old crusty French or Italian bread into 1/2-inch slices. Film a cookie sheet with oil and spread the croutons one-layer deep then turn each one in the pan to coat both sides. Bake in a preheated 375 degree oven until crisp and golden brown, about 8 minutes. Store extra croutons in a waxed paper-lined cookie tin.

SALMON SCALLOPS IN SORREL SAUCE

Salmon in sorrel sauce is one of the most classic dishes to emerge from the days of the Nouvelle Cuisine.

Serves 4

1 1/2 pounds center cut salmon filets

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

For the sauce

1/2 pound fresh sorrel leaves

2 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 shallots, finely chopped
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/2 cup cream or crème fraîche
Coarse (kosher) salt and pepper
Whole chives for garnish

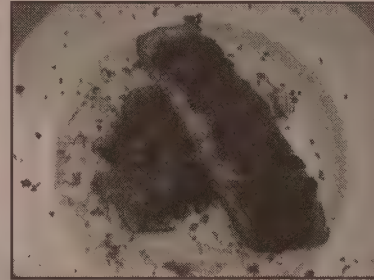

1. Divide the filets in two lengthwise, making 4 pieces weighing about 6 ounces each. Place each piece of salmon between two squares of waxed paper and lightly pound with a mallet to flatten slightly. Season the scallops with salt and pepper on the skinned side and place skinned-side down in a buttered non-reactive baking dish (Pyrex or ceramic).

2. Remove and discard central stems of sorrel, working from bottom to top. Rinse sorrel and pat dry with paper towel. Tear leaves into 2 or 3 pieces.

3. Melt butter in a skillet and put in the shallots. Sauté for a minute or so and add the wine. Reduce the wine by half and add the cream or crème fraîche. Bring to the edge of a boil and simmer briskly until cream is thickened slightly. Add the sorrel and stir into the liquid with a wooden spoon for a minute or so until a puree. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Keep warm.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

4. Drizzle salmon scallops lightly with oil and bake about 6-7 minutes. It's best to slightly undercook the salmon to keep the scallops tender. Divide the sorrel sauce on 4 warm plates. Place the scallops on the sauce and sprinkle lightly with coarse salt. Garnish with criss-cross of whole chives. Serve at once.

Dining In The Hamptons

Turtle Crossing has reopened for their tenth season. The East Hampton eatery will be open Thursday through Monday to start the season off. New this year, brunch will be offered on weekends beginning at 12 noon. The regular dinner menu will also be offered all day on weekends. After 9:30 p.m. every night, drinks are 1/2 price and special tortizzos (open faced quesadillas with inventive toppings) will be offered. Returning this season, Mama Lee and Friends perform live every Friday night at 5:30 p.m. Also, be on the look-out for new menu items. For details call 324-7166.

The Seafood Barge in Southold has announced the addition of new Executive Chef, Matthew Lewis. Prior to the Seafood Barge, Lewis was the Food and Beverage Director of the Hilton Garden Inn in Ronkonkoma. The Barge's new menu features Lobster and spinach spring rolls with pineapple compote ($11), Atlantic swordfish with sun-dried tomato couscous and saffron bouillabaisse broth ($27), orecchiette with shrimp and chorizo sautéed with baby bok choy ($25), and "steak and cake," a flat iron steak with glace de viande and crab cakes with horseradish whole grain mustard sauce ($29). For the full menu call 765-3010.

Also in new chef news, Belles East in Southampton has announced their new chef, Corey Fair. Fair comes to Belles East from Texas, where he picked up his cooking trade. He was the chef for The Texas Rangers Baseball Club, preparing meals for celebrities and sports stars, as well as two United States Presidents. Fair fine-tuned his cooking skills at The Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park. Chef Fair is an inductee into both the Chaine des Rotisseurs, an international honor society for chefs, and the Epicurean World Master Chefs Society. He has added his own flair to the menu with some new items. Stop in to Belles for a tasting. Belles East is currently open Thursday through Sunday with live entertainment each night. Call 204-0300 for more info.

If you're in the mood for authentic Mexican cuisine, La Fondita in Amagansett has some new daily specials which include: Thursday – Flautas de pollo, ($7): 3 corn tortillas rolled with chicken and fried, topped with lettuce, pico de gallo, crema and queso fresco and served with rice and refried beans. Located in Southampton, Robert's (726-7171) has introduced a new $27, three-course prix fixe. The ever-changing "marketplace menu" will emphasize seasonal dishes. The prix fixe will be available Thursday, Friday and Sunday all evening, and from 5 p.m. until 6:30 p.m. on Saturdays.

A second new prix fixe now available is at Ristorante Capri (907-8030) in Wainscott. Capri is now offering a three-course prix fixe for $24.95, available all night Sunday through Thursday and until 6:45 on Friday and Saturday evenings. There is a wide variety of choices on the special menu, which includes first courses such as escarole soup and sautéed eggplant with mozzarella, and second courses such as sautéed snapper with lemon garlic sauce and pork medallions and mushrooms in a Marsala sauce. Dessert choices include profiteroles, lemon puffs and biscotti.

We hear that Beacon in Sag Harbor (725-7088) will reopen next weekend. Beside the fab elevated water view, you can avail yourself of Chef Sam McClelland's updated menu.

A svelte Nathan Lane was seen chowing on a burger at 75 Main in Southampton and reviewing a script after purchasing a teak patio set next door from Hildreth's department store.

Dining In The Hamptons

One of the main attractions in Montauk is Gosman's Dock and Restaurant in Montauk Harbor. Over the weekend my friend and I decided to spend a leisurely day in Montauk and headed to Montauk Harbor for lunch. We knew Gosman's had recently opened for the season and had our hearts set on enjoying a relaxing meal. The sun was reflecting on the water, but the wind was taking its toll, making for a slightly chilly afternoon.

We parked our car and walked quickly toward the restaurant. A few shops were open, but many were still preparing for Memorial Day weekend. We were immediately greeted by Ann Raehse, the daytime manager, and escorted to our table. Although the season has not kicked into full swing, the dining room was quite busy for early May. We sat at a table in front of the window; well, then again, every seat in the house is virtually in front of a window (or at least has an excellent view of the harbor).

Gosman's is a great restaurant to come to alone or with the entire family. Children and adults can be captivated by the exquisite views of the fishing vessels as they arrive and depart all day long in and out of the harbor. As we perused our menus, our server Fiona informed us of the daily specials. A warm bread basket tempted our appetites, but we knew we had to save room for our meals.

To start, we decided to share the stuffed mushrooms for our appetizer. A piping hot ceramic dish arrived filled with succulent mushrooms holding a mixture of lobster, shrimp and scallops served in a

Gosman's Restaurant

light lemon and garlic sauce. Every bite was a juicy delight, matched with a perfect blend of complimentary ingredients and spices. I also ordered a cup of Gosman's lobster bisque to try. This creamy blend of tiny bits of lobster swimming in a smooth, mildly tangy consistency sparked my taste buds. Next up was a crisp green salad, on which we both opted for Gosman's divine chunky homemade blue cheese dressing.

A few other favorite appetizers include: a shrimp and lobster wrap loaded with shrimp and lobster salad and wrapped in a flour tortilla mixed with spring greens and New England crab cakes made with Jonah crab and fresh herbs with plum tomato aioli.

It was time for our entrees and we were already feeling full. That was until we saw the beautiful presentation of our meals. For me, it was a stuffed baked lobster and my friend had selected the Cajun catch of the day, which was sea trout. I prepared myself by dressing in that funny lobster bib as a precautionary measure to catch any drippings of warm butter or flying shell bits as I cracked open the lobster. The meat was sweet and perfectly complimented the stuffing which consisted of whole shrimps, scallops and even more lobster meat. My friend's Cajun fish was broiled to perfection with just the right amount of spices with a drizzle of a buttery light lemon sauce on top. Although neither of us had tasted trout before, we agreed it was a mild fish. Not as mild as flounder, but it definitely was not as distinct tasting as a blue fish might be.

Gosman's also offers an array of daily specials that tempt patrons. However, a few other standouts on the regular menu include fresh filet of sole (a favorite among guests) stuffed with asparagus and served with a lobster sauce and grilled marinated tuna steak, marinated in olive oil, basil, fresh herbs, ginger and soy sauce. A variety of seafood platter combinations are popular as well.

Gosman's serves the freshest seafood and takes special care in making certain that every entrée is prepared and served with the highest quality ingredients. Unfortunately, we didn't have room for dessert, but we will back for the warm chocolate cake served with vanilla ice cream next time. A variety of fine spirits and local and imported wines are also available.

Prices range is as follows; appetizers $6.95 and up, entrees start at $16.95.

Children's Books On Travel

It's great fun to plan a vacation. It was also great fun to NOT plan the vacation — when I was a child. The plans were made, the bags were packed and the fun began, through no effort of my own. With summer vacation approaching, plans are once again being made to travel far and wide, see new sights, and learn new things. If you are planning adventures with your children, it's a good idea, to make the most of their experience, to teach them a bit about what to expect. Familiarizing your kids with the wonders they will encounter, whether it is Notre Dame or the Delaware Water Gap, will help them to create long-lasting memories.

There are hundreds of fabulous books whose subject matter is geared towards travel education for small children. This summer, Universe Books, an imprint of Rizzoli Publications International, will reprint M. Sasek's classics, This Is London and This Is Paris. Czech author and illustrator Sasek was born in Prague in 1916 and died in Munich in 1980. He had lived in Munich for most of his life, but traveled the world and wrote 18 books in the acclaimed This Is series. This Is London won the NY Times Choice of Best Illustrated Books in 1959, and This Is New York won the same award in 1960.

Sasek's style is wild and uninhibited, boldly designed but vigorously detailed. The stories are lighthearted treks through Sasek's favorite cities, with visits to spectacular landmarks like Piccadilly Circus, Westminster Abbey, and Scotland Yard, and also the most commonplace locales like an underground tube station, or along the route of a double decker bus that will seem exotic to a child's eyes. In Paris, you will see Monmartre, Saint Germain de Pres and a humble flower stall. The magic of each city fairly explodes from the pages, where even the smallest details that give each one its singular personality are highlighted. Included in the reprints are indexes that update expired statistics. In 2003, Universe successfully released This Is San Francisco and This Is New York. These next installments will certainly be a hit.

Younger children have loved the adventures of the sweet little monkey Curious George for the past fifty years, and he is still a delight. Written by the husband and wife team of Margaret & R.A. Rey, the first Curious George was published in 1941, and since then, they have been reprinted in dozens of languages, attesting to their universal appeal. There are many titles to choose among, available as board books, in oversized versions or in paperback. In Curious George Goes Camping, George sets up his tent, is sprayed by a skunk, gets lost in the woods and puts out a forest fire to save the day. Curious George Goes To The Beach has the little monkey feeding the seagulls, sitting in a lifeguard chair and helping his friend Betsy overcome her fear of swimming in the ocean.

A lively, stylish cat from New York City is the feline in charge in Oui, Oui, Waikiki, by Mighty Fine. It is the second adventure of French Kitty, and this time, she travels to Hawaii for her friend Fifi the Poodle's wedding. She packs quickly, hops on a plane on a moment's notice and takes Hawaii by storm, attending a beachfront soiree and searching the shops for the perfect wedding present — a carved tiki. Accompanied by fluorescent colors and an extravagant typeface that complements the lilting rhyming verse, French Kitty falls in love with a Calico singing show tunes. In the first book, French Kitty Goes To Paris, she flew to the City of Lights in search of the perfect hat. She explored French culture, cuisine and couture. These books are fantastical, whimsical and energetic, and will surely excite a child's sense of fun.

Of another sensibility entirely are The Misadventures of Gaspard and Lisa, a series of books for ages 4-8 that follow the adventures of two little dogs. They are best friends who travel, together and separately, all over the world. Gaspard On Vacation was the first book, and shows the little Gaspard getting into all sorts of trouble on his family vacation to Venice. Gaspard At The Seashore details adventure at summer camp, where Gaspard is off to learn windsurfing. Lisa goes to New York in one book, and to the jungle, in her imagination, in another. Together, they go to the Natural History Museum. The stories, written by Anne Gutman, are simple and touching, and the illustrations, by her husband, artist Georg Hallensteben, are beautiful. Every page seems to be a realized painting, with visible brushstrokes, rich colors and imaginative composition and perspective.

Odd Girl Out: The Hidden Culture of Aggression in Girls

Rachel Simmons

Although Simmons is certainly not the first to write about schoolgirl cruelty, she treats the subject in a thorough and illuminating manner. Simmons contends that incidents of bullying could be avoided if girls were encouraged to acknowledge their aggression. She believes this would empower them to negotiate conflicts and to define relationships in "new and healthier ways." Parents, she says, should show their daughters that conflict-free relationships don't exist. Instead of thinking conflict ends relationships, girls would then learn that they can't survive without it, let fear control them. "I believe our task now is to give every girl, every parent, and every teacher a shared, public language to address girls' conflicts and relationships." A graduate of Vassar College and a Rhodes Scholar, Rachel is currently the director of Sidwell Friends' leadership camps for girls and a consultant to schools all over the country. She is also a national trainer for the Ophelia Project of Erie, PA. For more information go to www.rachelsimmons.com.

Away At School... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Other People's Shoes

As I grow older I have come to realize that a big part of life is thinking about how other people are going to react to certain things that you say. I never really paid attention to the things that I say. I just kind of said them. Even in this column, I never really think too much about what people are going to think about when I write the stuff I think. I just kind of say what I think because I just want to. In the past six months however, I have thought a great deal more about how people are going to react to things. Let me try and give you an example of what I am talking about.

My brother Gabriel is a good example of this. My brother Gabe and I grew up together with a pretty rocky relationship. I am one year older than him and for a long time, acted like I was fifty years older than him. For most of my high school career, Gabe and I rarely saw eye to eye on anything and it completely had to do with the way that I treated him. I was critical. I saw something wrong with everything he did. He would say that he was interested in studying music and I would say to him that I thought that was a bad idea. I would tell him that music was a long shot and that he needed a back up plan and that he was stupid for not having one. This would get Gabe mad, really mad and he learned to resent me.

For some reason, as a youngster, I couldn't figure out why Gabe didn't like me. He would avoid me, not talk to me, we weren't this dynamic duo that I secretly dreamed about being, like brothers that are in the movies, who you know, rely on one another. No, instead, because of my criticism of him, our relationship greatly suffered. He hated me, I liked him, but couldn't really figure out why he hated me, even though deep down I kind of knew that it was because I was always telling him what I thought he should do, instead of telling him that I thought what he was doing was great.

The thing that was so frustrating for me was that I was trying to help him. I honestly felt that criticizing him was doing him a favor. I thought that by telling him what was wrong with every little thing that he did he would look at me and say, "Gee, thanks, Dave, I really appreciate it and will change."

Of course, the complete opposite happened and it wasn't really until just a couple of years ago that

David and Gabriel Rattiner

Gabe and I did kind of look at one another and say, "We are brothers. I am me and you are you and I am sorry." We had a moment, a real brother moment that only happens every once in a while. It was a big deal for me and I was so glad that we suddenly let things go. I remember the day. It took thirty seconds, and just like that, Gabe and I were brothers again. To this day, I make sure only to give him advice when he asks for it and if I do ever criticize I apologize.

People, especially the people that you love, are so hard not to criticize. The reason that you do it is not because you think that they are terrible people, but because you want so much more for them. You want them to do what you think in your mind would make them happy. The fact of the matter is, however, that what you think would be good for them or make them happy is probably not the same thing as what they think.

Criticizing the people that you love is very tricky business and as I have grown a little bit, I have learned to avoid it almost completely. When I feel like criticizing some one now, for example, I say to myself, "Is the problem that I see a real problem? Or is it something that just annoys me personally?" Almost always, the answer to this question is that it is something that annoys me personally.

I worry about one day having kids and being too critical of them. I know this is crazy, but I want to grow up one day and have a family, I mean, that's the goal for a lot of people. If you are too critical of even your own kids, however, they resent you, even hate you. There are plenty of situation where that happens.

I think that the real key to this is to say to myself, I am a person critical of the people that I love and being overly critical can destroy a relationship. The choice becomes to maintain the relationship and not be critical or destroy the relationship and criticize the crap out of them. I guess the whole point of all of this is that you got to let people be who they are. As long as they are not evil people and are generally good, then I believe that letting people be is very important.

Maybe I am the only one who has had to deal with this kind of thing, but there have been countless situations where I did not understand why someone was angry with me for being critical of them. I felt that I was just trying to help them, but in actuality I was simply hurting a good relationship.

Growing up is weird, man. All of the sudden I start thinking about this kind of stuff. I feel like things used to be so much simpler. All I had to do was say please and thank you and everyone would smile and say what a great kid I was. Things just get a little different, I guess.

When In Manhattan...

Peace and Love with Robert Indiana

The world is getting uglier by the day. War is hell. They say that for a reason. It changes people. A professor of mine stormed Omaha Beach at Normandy. He said he saw the worst and could never agree to send men to battle again. This really has to stop. Peace is the answer, and Robert Indiana is showing exactly that in Manhattan this week with a new collection of PEACE paintings at the Paul Kasmin Gallery in Chelsea.

Robert Indiana has always had a positive message. The 75-year-old artist is perhaps most known for his famous LOVE paintings and sculptures using only the letters to form a Pop image that became indelible in the 60s. The man was 17 when World War II ended, and has thus been a conscientious adult through all the conflicts that followed. Traffic signs, automatic amusement machines, commercial stencils and old trade names inspired his early works, and it is from this that he came to the very direct approach used in the graphic LOVE paintings and carried into the work showing today. Each canvas features the classic image of a peace symbol combined with bright colors and wordplay that goes from hopeful to abysmally cynical. "I feel more despair than hope with each passing day," he said. In one painting called "Four Diamond Peace (Red)," Indiana uses four panels to create four rallying cries inscribed around the inverted Y peace symbol made an icon in the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament. Each panel respectively asks the viewer to Shout, Shriek, Scream, and, in true Ginsberg fashion, Howl for Peace Now. Another such piece, "Four Diamond Peace (Blue)," calls for Whoops, Hoots, Hollers, and Clamors, for the same single peace symbol with one catch phrase per painting. The man who brought us love now laments with statements like: "Peace Dives in Oblivion," "Peace Falls in Terror," and "Peace Eludes the World." There is no mistaking the message. No interpretation is necessary. Robert Indiana is begging for a change. He calls out in pain for all of us who feel it. The artist was affected first hand when he happened to be in the city on September the 11th of 2001, and it's hard to miss the connection in the paint. The elongated peace signs resemble missiles or skyscrapers, and with messages like "Peace Falls in Terror," we don't question the dramatic effect the day had on him. Indiana has always fought for something. In 1965-66, a series of paintings called The Confederacy attacked the racist violence of the era, and of course he was equally opposed to the Vietnam war in the following years. Appropriately, along with PEACE, Indiana is showing LOVE with a 6-foot bright violet and red sculpture of the word. We all know you can't have one without the other.

"Robert Indiana: Peace Paintings," is on view at Paul Kasmin Gallery at 293 Tenth Avenue at 27th Street through May 29. Call (212) 563 4474 or visit www.paulkasmingallery.com for gallery hours and further information.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

East Coast Cowboy opened on May 1 at 47 Newtown Lane. Owners Bob Curtis and Sarah VonFrank, who have been working together for over ten years, have combined their talents, making East Coast Cowboy a dream come true. Bob started out making hand-crafted leather goods for the rich and famous over thirty-five years ago. Sarah came along and learned the trade from him and began managing the store. Together they started to bring in more products, concentrating heavily on one-of-a-kind, quality merchandise. After many years of fine tuning, the result is East End Cowboy, a perfect blend of both their styles.

This is a friendly, unique shop that carries an assortment of fun, funky clothing and accessories for both men and women, considered a little biker, a little Rock and Roll, as well as a little bit of cowboy... There is a huge selection of belts, buckles, hats, clothing and boots for everyone's taste. The jeans that they offer are guaranteed to make you feel like a rock star, indeed, and there are vintage motorcycle jackets and boots, along with traditional cowboy boots that are just what the rodeo ordered. If you like the pointy toe boot look, they are available here, too. The belt and belt-buckle selection is incredible, from a nice and conservative look to the rough and rugged rodeo style. Straw hats are in abundance here and the colors and shapes are amazing.

With the merchandise constantly changing, there is always something new happening at East Coast Cowboy, making this a frequent stop and shop for most. For information call Bob and Sarah at 631-329-7676.

Owners Ira and Helen Spanierman, of the renowned Spanierman Gallery in Manhattan, have opened an East Hampton location at 66 Newtown Lane, second floor suite 4. Opening day is slated for Thursday, May 27, and thereafter they will be open on Thursday through Monday from 12 noon until 5 p.m., or by appointment.

The 45 East 58th Street location is presided over by Ira Spanierman and his son Gavin. For more than fifty years, Spanierman Gallery, LLC has been dedicated to dealing in the finest nineteenth and early twentieth-century American painting and sculpture. With 10,000 square feet of area, the gallery is able to present museum-quality shows including works on loan from museums and private collections, as well as works from its own holdings. The gallery is distinguished for its scholarship and actively supports research in American art.

The East Hampton gallery will feature five exhibits throughout the summer months. The first show is "Edith Prellwitz and Henry Prellwitz: Painters of Peconic" (she lived and painted in Peconic, Long Island around the turn of the century). The show will run from May 27 through June 21. Just a few of the artists represented by the Spanierman Gallery include Milton Avery, Thomas Moran, Childe Hassam and Winslow Homer.

The Spanierman Gallery at East Hampton will offer art advisory services to their East End clientele.

For further information contact The Spanierman Gallery at East Hampton at (631) 329-5855 or in Manhattan at (212) 832-0208. Or, visit them on the web at: www.spanierman.com.

How about a vet service that comes right to your door? Dr. Cindy Bressler, DVM, of Amagansett, has set up shop on the East End and is establishing a house-call veterinarian practice to provide pet medical care at your home. Her medical practice is based exclusively around home visits, removing the stress of bringing your pet to the vet's office. Better still, in addition to regular daytime office hours, Dr. Bressler is available in the evenings and on weekends and holidays. Dr. Bressler is able to conduct most treatment (including emergency care) from the comfort of your home.

Typical at-home veterinary services include healthy and sick pet exams, vaccinations, blood tests and blood pressure monitoring. Additionally, Dr. Bressler specializes in internal medicine and will provide consultation and treatment for challenging medical cases, and will be available at all times for pet emergency cases.

This extraordinary service ensures client privacy and is convenient and reduces the stress and nervousness animals may experience in having to go to the doctor's office.

Prior to establishing her own practice, Dr. Bressler worked with many prominent veterinary clinics in New York City including Westside Veterinary Center where she has cared for numerous celebrity pets. For further information call Dr. Cindy Bressler at 631-255-8556.

I purchased the American Flag logo for my granddaughters Chelsea and Krista, who are not only cousins, but have become pen-pals. There are farms, fences, lobsters, and so much more to choose from. And of course, there is always a little special going on at Dunkerley's. Check it out.

On Montauk Highway in Southampton at Pier One Imports, you will love the "Fun in the Sun" sale that will run until May 22. Save 20% to 30% on outdoor lighting, wind chimes, door mats, garden furnishings, Cabana Bali picnic baskets ($32), bright and shiny beaded fish tealight holders and so much more. A great birdbath is affordable at $60. I especially like the outdoor patio furniture, in all the newest, bright colors, that goes easy on your pocketbook.

There is great stuff and good fun at Bridgehampton's Déjà vu Antiques & Collectibles. The shop has what you need from the kitchen to the boudoir to the game room. Open year round, five days a week (closed Sunday and Monday), the shop also buys and consigns.

Have you been to Treasure Island at Wainscott Village Center on Montauk Highway, East Hampton this season yet? Well...you must stop and see one of the largest selections of patio umbrellas, patio tables with style, chairs and accessories. The store is filled to the rafters with good deals for the upcoming season. There is even a craft department for the crafty shopper...Get going, need I say more?

One shop you shouldn't pass up is The Down Factory Store at The Elegant John on Montauk Highway, East Hampton for an unimaginable selection at unbeatable prices. The home furnishings department has so much to choose from that I'll bet you weren't even aware of...Look for unique towel racks, rugs, bath accessories, robes, mirrors (wall and vanity), scented candles and soaps, drawer liners, brushes for nails, back, hair and shaving, shower curtains and liners that range in sizes 72" to 96", china lamps (that are always discounted), scales, wall hardware, shower caddies, hampers, clothes hangers, bed linens, towels, sheets, dust ruffles, and mattress pads, not to mention the affordable prices on goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Stop in and say hi to Richard and Frank; they will be happy to assist you.

Nearby at the Red Horse Market at the Hunting House Antiques you will find a new shipment of 18th and 19th Century English and French furniture and accessories.

If you need a last minute gift, stop into A Little Of What You Fancy on Newtown Lane in East Hampton for a nice selection of Kiehl's, Godiva, The Thymes, Crabtree & Evelyn, Root, and more. And I'll bet you will find something for yourself that you will treasure forever.

Until next week, ciao and Happy Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops, sales or where to find something special, please email me at: shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at 631-537-0500. I would love to hear from you...

That Million Dollar Smile, Literally

Everybody wants that bright shiny smile all the celebrities have. You know the smile that I am talking about. I am talking about the kind of smile that when you see it, you can see it across the room. I am talking about the kind of smile that you compliment by saying, "You know you have a really great set of teeth there. They are so white!"

A terrible trait of the human mind emerges when you see a smile like that. The trait, of course, is envy. A lot of people, especially out in the Hamptons, suffer from it. Yes, it is easy to be envious of the house on the beach or a sick, ridiculously awesome Ferrari and yes, these kinds of things might be out of your reach. But a bright white smile? Get out of here! That shouldn't be something that you can't afford. Well, you would be surprised what people do to get those pearly whites pearly white. Dentists can charge anywhere from four hundred to one thousand dollars to brighten up your smile using laser beams and tooth molds with teeth bleach in them. Granted, this can kind of pose a bit of a problem for some of us, but if you want that crazy white smile, there are other options out there.

There are numerous products out right now that advertise teeth whitening. I'm talking bleaches, baby, chemicals that destroy the icky stuff that makes your teeth not so white. Crest, the famous tooth company that we all know, has two super whitening products that have become very popular. These two products are the Crest Night Effects and the Crest Whitening Strips. Both products will run you around twenty to thirty bucks.

I went out and bought the Crest Night Effects just to try it out. I got to tell you, it is kind of an awful experience, but beauty isn't supposed to be fun, right? Well, you get this small paint brush that comes in a box along with these little tubes of goo. The way it works is that you take some of the goo and you put it on the paint brush and then you coat your teeth with the goo. You then let it dry and go to sleep on it.

As a heroic writer, always seeking out for people what will help them in their journey through life, I slept with white goo in my mouth. I've got to tell you, you should only consider using this product if you are a really heavy sleeper. The goo in your mouth tastes really gross and you are afraid to swallow it for some reason. I don't think that anything happens to you if you end up swallowing some of this goo, but the fact that it is advertised as a bleaching agent is kind of a scary thought. When you hear the word bleach, you think of the bleach that you put into a washing machine and before you know it, you get paranoid about swallowing some of this Crest goo.

I woke up the next morning, looking for a whiter smile. I brushed my teeth like a maniac, but to be honest with you, I did not really notice a difference. The product says that you need to use it for fifteen days straight before you see some results. Screw that, man, I'm going after the white strips.

Now, I had already spent the thirty bucks on one product, so I wasn't about to do the same for another, so I called around. I see them in bathrooms every once in a while. My friend Jim ended up having some white strips so I decided to give that a shot.

The way white strips work is pretty similar to that of the night effects, only you are not supposed to wear it at night and you don't paint it on. The strips are kind of like these plastic braces that stick to your teeth. The whitening agent is right on the plastic so when you put them on your top and bottom teeth, the whitening agent sticks and gets to work. I gave them a shot.

Again, I feared to swallow. I was terrified of being poisoned by bleach, but of course, there is nothing to worry about. I still kept my mouth open and did my best to avoid swallowing. You are supposed to wear these things for thirty minutes, twice a day, for twenty-one days. I lasted about ten minutes and spit it out.

I guess you could say that I am not much of a candidate for these kinds of things, but I do hear that they work really well and I have noticed those million dollar smiles before and found out later that they were due to these products.

You can overuse these products, of course, so be careful. They can do damage to the gum line and even eat away at your tooth enamel. They do work, however, and if you can deal with the effort, you should definitely give it a shot.

It's not easy living in this day and age. Everyone wants everything perfect and if it isn't, then you have yourself a problem. Teeth are no exception. A bright, white, healthy smile can get you places. It is the difference between getting a date and not getting one. It is life and death, man - well okay, not so much life or death. But having a great white smile can make you feel good, and in the end, that is all that matters.

Fighting Teen Acne

Just in time for the prom...an outbreak of acne! Any parent can tell you what research now proves. The effects of zits are more than skin deep for many teens. A recent report by the American Counseling Association has revealed that "teen acne is connected to self esteem issues and can impact schoolwork and relationships."

For years, advice on how to battle breakouts centered on improving poor diet and reducing stress. It was believed that the secret to flawless skin was to simply abstain from chocolate and pizza.

"That is a myth," says Dr. Doris Day, assistant professor of Dermatology at New York University Medical Center. The good news is that there is no scientific evidence linking foods, such as a slice of a Sicilian pie, greasy French Fries or gooey candy bars, to acne.

Pimples are actually caused by a combination of hormones, excessive sebum (oil formed in hair follicles) and bacteria that can clog pores. According to the American Academy of Dermatology, 40 percent of all adolescents in their mid-teens have acne severe enough to require medical treatment by a physician. Adolescent women, in particular, say their confidence is strongly linked to appearance. Unfortunately, for most teens, acne is an unwanted rite of passage.

To help treat breakouts, Dr. Day cautions against succumbing to the urge to pop pimples. Such an invasive action may result in scarring sensitive skin. She also admonishes against aggressive scrubbing to try and rub out breakouts. Rather, she counsels young people to adopt a skincare routine that will work for them, and finds many of the over-the-counter treatments to be highly effective.

There are many advanced skincare solutions available. Try ones that use salicylic acid such as in the Clean & Clear line of acne fighting treatments. For example, the Clear Advantage Acne Cleanser helps reduce oil build-up. The Daily Acne Cleaning Lotion is applied after cleansing. The lotion is oil-free and lightweight enough to penetrate pores and stop breakouts without over-drying, while the Advantage Acne Spot Treatment with 2% salicylic acid is clinically proven to reduce redness and the visible size of pimples in just one day.

Another over-the-counter topical is benzyl peroxide that can be found in lots of acne creams. Just be sure to avoid alcohol-based treatments that can cause irritation. Severe cases may be best treated by a physician who might prescribe an oral antibiotic, such as tetracycline, an erythromycin, or a vitamin A derivative, such as retinoid, or even birth control to try and tame raging hormones.

"Teenagers want instant gratification and they want acne to go away now," notes Karen Zagar, a psychologist who works with teenagers. "For teenagers, the peer group is very important. Acne is right upfront and visible, which causes tremendous social anxiety."

So ignore the myths (sorry, a tan won't dry up breakouts) and give your teen an unfair advantage in combating acne. Have your daughter gently wash her face twice a day with a mild but effective cleanser and then apply either an acne lotion or spot treatment. Active teens on the go can also benefit from products such as cleansing pads. They are formulated to remove dirt and oil, and are portable and convenient to use following after-school sports.

To learn more about combating acne, visit the American Academy of Dermatology (AAD) web site at www.aad.org.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Uncanny Cannas

Each year at Rock Cottage, we like to add tropical accents just to create points of interest and to synchronize with the East End heat and humidity. Now that the danger of frost has passed, it is time to select these accents for this season.

Canna lilies (named for the Greek word for "reed") are uncannily suited as a garden addition on the East End. The plants are especially effective in mass plantings in raised beds, as backdrops in the border, or in large, accent containers. Cannas look like miniature banana trees, and, in fact, are cousins to the bananas and gingers. The canna's furled leaves come out of thick, multi-eyed rhizomes, just like their larger, edible kin. The plants were extremely popular during Victorian times when people sought something exotic in gardening. They have regained that popularity today from the ongoing hybridizing that has produced some very attractive colors and sizes.

Depending on the variety, cannas grow from about one-and-a half feet to eight feet tall. The large, glossy leaves are typically six inches to twelve inches wide and may be three feet long. Leaves come in shades ranging from green to bronze. Some of the newer, more striking cultivars may have foliage including red or purple stripes.

Not only are the leaves of interest, cannas produce lovely flowers in shades of red, rose/pink, yellow, red/yellow, dark red, or near-white. The flowers appear in clusters called spathes that may be up to a foot long. The flowers are typically non-fragrant, but highly enticing to hummingbirds.

Cannas are remarkably easy to grow, and should be planted in groupings of five or more rhizomes. Plant the rhizomes directly in garden soil at this three inches, as the plants have a tendency to become top-heavy and may topple when planted at a shallow depth.

Cannas are heavy feeders and drinkers. They need about two inches of water each week. Because they like water, cannas are ideal for wet or boggy areas (they will even thrive in slightly polluted water). Like their cousins the bananas, cannas like to feast and benefit from feeding. Cannas will thrive with a handful of bone meal or rose fertilizer once or twice during the summer.

In the fall, after the first frost kills back the foliage, cut the stalks to about four inches long. Carefully dig the rhizomes and cut the stalks to about two inches long. Let the rhizomes dry for a few days, and then place in peat moss or vermiculite in a cool area where they will not freeze (winter temperature needs to be about 50 degrees).

Every few years, the rhizomes may be divided to increase the number of plants. Rhizomes can be separated so that each piece has an eye or growing point. When dividing the rhizomes, let them dry out for a few days before planting.

While cannas are not winter hardy, they are well worth the effort of the yearly planting, digging, and storing. If you are willing to search for some of the unusual varieties, cannas can also provide an eye-catching point of conversation for sultry summer afternoons and evenings. At Rock Cottage, we have not found an easier or better selection that achieves the uncanny touch of the tropics for the East End!

time of the year, in a location receiving full sun. Cannas will grow in partial sun, but produce fewer flowers than leaves in this circumstance.

Before planting the rhizomes, the soil must be enriched with compost, rotted manure, or peat moss, and cultivated to about a foot deep. Position the rhizomes four inches deep and about a foot in between. Do not plant the rhizomes closer to the surface than

For The Birds

Birds are singing. Every morning, at the hint of dawn, outside our bedroom window. Catbirds mewing with force, chickadees tweeting "to the beach, to the beach" at a pitch that makes it seem like an emergency. We have more robins than a golf course, blue jays by the dozens, bright goldfinches, graphically painted Baltimore orioles, skulking grackles and countless others. Having this many birds flocking to the yard, bathing on the pool cover after a rain shower, tightrope-walking along the deck railing, and sitting in the sun on the car mirror, pooping all the way, makes a real mess.

Paul Nilsson

But there's a flip side, because the birds are harbingers of spring and the inevitability of warm sunshine. So we sleep with the windows opened, inviting nature's din to punctuate our dreams, which are probably sweeter because of it. The sounds and scents, missed for months, draw us out of our winter hibernation and back into interaction with the natural world. And it's worth the wake-up calls and the power-washing. In fact, we are encouraging the birds to visit and to spend their time singing in our ears. We have a birdhouse and a birdfeeder.

There are three different types of basic birdfeeders – platform, hopper and tube – and each is constructed in a particular way to attract the attentions of a particular range of species. Small songbirds do best when they are not bothered by the larger and more aggressive birds like the crows, grackles and blue jays, and tube feeders (clear plastic vertical tubes with perches and holes running down the sides), are intended for this purpose. Most often mounted on a decorative stake in the garden, tube feeders beckon small birds to sit on the perch and pull the seeds out of the holes. Often called finch feeders because of the likelihood of attracting these small beauties, tube feeders will also make chickadees, wrens, sparrows and bluebirds blissfully happy.

The platform feeder is a simple wooden tray with low walls that prevent the seed from spilling onto the ground. You can either mount this feeder on a pole, in attempts to dissuade squirrels from planting their bushy tails and staying all day, or place it on the ground if you are unconcerned with furry friends. This feeder is not recommended if you consider larger birds to be trouble-makers, but if you like to have cardinals, robins, red-winged blackbirds and their like-sized friends around, it is fine. A hopper feeder may do the trick for you if you want a bit more variety than just small birds, and a bit less chaos than the largest backyard species can cause. It is a more sophisticated platform feeder, with four walls and a roof. Seeds funnel out of the bottom, onto a ledge, where the hungry birds await. Often, two walls are made of clear plastic so you can check the seed level and know when it is time to refill. This feeder is better at protecting the feed from the elements than the plain platform feeder, and also offers more shielding from unwelcome predatory animals.

All birds have their favorite munchies, just like we do, but they are not at all as picky. Black oiled sunflower seeds are the best all-around choice, a nutritious combination of fat and protein that is loved by almost all backyard birdfeeder visitors. Of course, there are birds in our area who prefer eating other things that occur in nature – insects pulled from the crevices of deciduous trees and from beneath fallen leaves, fruits, berries and acorns, seeds from pine cones and flowers, and flower nectar. Hummingbirds will accept a sugar water substitute served in a preferably bright-red, specially-designed nectar feeder, and woodpeckers, wrens, and titmouses love suet – a rather gross combination of seeds and nuts mixed with a serving of fat from around the kidney of a cow. Better set out in the colder months, suet turns rancid easily in the heat, and must be changed often. Suet feeders are hung directly on the tree trunk. I did it once. I'm not doing it again.

A Flower's Afterlife

A bouquet of flowers can be a beautiful expression of amorous feelings or warm sentiments for just about any occasion. People all around the globe send and receive flowers year-round, whether it be for birthdays, anniversaries, christenings, Valentine's or even Name Days. And, of course, there's Mother's Day, which we all learned a few days ago can mean an abundance of fragrant roses, lovely lilies, or delicate tulips for every mother on the block.

The one drawback to the universal classy gift of flowers is their unfortunately short lifespan. After a couple of days of sitting up beautifully straight in their vase on the kitchen table or in the foyer, they start to slouch, a bit like the kids at dinner. Telling them to straighten up may not work, but trimming their stems again, changing the water, and giving them some more plant food may give them a few more days of vibrant life.

But for every flower, there comes a day when it's time for them to graduate out of the vase. This graduation does not necessarily mean they must move on into the trash bin. Quite the contrary, as there are tons of creative ways to give the stunning flowers "that were" a new life "that is."

One way to preserve flowers in a very lifelike state is to air-dry them. Often times, you will see bunches of flowers tied and hung upside-down on the wall of someone's home. This is not only the most common and simplest way of drying flowers, but it also was the method used by the English colonists when they arrived in America. The key to this method is to remove the foliage and hang the flowers in a warm, dark and dry place so that they don't fade in the light and can dry "comfortably." Also, the best time to hang them is right before they open because they will continue to bloom a bit while hanging. And just make sure that the flowers are in an arrangement that you like before you hang them because as they dry, they become rather stiff. Flowers that air-dry well and are great for home decoration include goldenrods, globe amaranths, pussy willows and baby's breath, but be forewarned that roses and peonies will shrink when air-dried.

Another great way to revive the flowers that you receive is to dry them in the microwave, which preserves the flowers' colors much better than air-drying. African marigolds, buttercups, lilacs, tulips and daffodils, along with many others, dry beautifully using this method. But before you zap them, place the flowers in a microwave-safe container without the lid and support them with a dessicant, such as silica gel, which can be substituted with kitty litter or a borax/sand mixture. Using a low heat setting, microwave the flowers for two to three minutes, depending on petal thickness as well as the specific microwave. Afterwards, spray them with hair spray or lacquer in order to keep moisture away and let settle for 12 to 24 hours, until cool and dry.

Flower preservation can also be done by doing none other than burying them. Although it may sound rather odd, flowers can be dried by submerging them in the above dessicants and letting the mixture soak up the moisture in the flowers. Some dessicating materials require using containers with or without lids, so use them accordingly. The most important part of this method is the delicate burial procedure. Place about an inch of dessicant on the bottom of the container and stand the flower stem in the center. Then pour out the dessicant around the outer rim of the container and tap it lightly in order to ease the material towards the center to surround the flower. Continue this until the flower is embedded in the mixture.

Removal of the flower also must be done very delicately and does not bode well if the flower readily sheds its petals, like poppies do.

A fourth way to give your flowers a new life after their original one is to simply press them. This is an especially good method for those who would love to be creative with their flower preservation, but just can't seem to find the time. All you really need is your favorite book. Place the flower in between the pages, shut the book and put it back on the shelf.

Chances are, you'll forget it's in there until you go to read it again, and the memorabilia falls right in your lap, attesting to the flower's after-life.

Instead, we hang our birdhouse on the trunk of a tree, a bit off to the side and out of the way – the theory being that once the small birds find it and realize its potential, one of them will move right in, lay some eggs that will hatch and make a family, and then feel safe and secure enough to fly off, find food, and bring it back home for the babies. We only put it up a few weeks ago, and the birds haven't found it yet.

Paul Nilsson encourages patience. A custom woodworker and designer of birdhouses and feeders (631-475-3306 and www.gotbirdz.com), Nilsson has won awards for his windmill and lighthouse shapes. He has four birdhouses in his own yard, and insists that 5 or 6 times a year, birdie families come and go from his property, happily moving in and out of his houses. I saw his display at the Cedar Point Lighthouse Day, and he gave me some tips. First, be sure to put the birdhouse out of the way of human traffic, or you will scare away the momma bird, and the babies will starve. Although it's tempting to place the house right next to your deck or in the flower patch you are always weeding, don't do it. In addition, you must keep the house at least 4-6 feet off the ground so squirrels cannot get in it. I am seriously considering adding one of his large, beautiful lighthouses to our yard – they are freestanding, about 4 feet tall, and brightly painted. The birds can't miss them.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Recent Transfers:

Paumanok Vineyards just acquired another 29.6 acre parcel in Jamesport. The land, part of what is known as the Keyspan property, was one of the seven parcels bid on by 45 prospective buyers through a lottery system. Only seven won the opportunity to purchase the discounted land that closed in late March. The 280 acre parcel is part of 529 acres that border the Long Island Sound. The land was purchased from Keyspan by the state in order to prevent development on the farmlands. The winners paid only $13,000 per acre under a farm acquisition program as opposed to the $50,000 going rate.

Caswells, a restaurant named for the part of Montauk known best to stalwart surfcasters, was on the market only a little more than a month before it sold. The property, an already established business in the heart of town, will be operating as Aqua, across from the site of the new Catholic Church. The sale included the restaurant, two stores and an owner's apartment and was priced at $1.5 million.

On The Market:

A Piece of Southampton History

The Foster House was built by Josiah Foster, a native Southampton resident, in 1807. It once stood in town where the First National Bank is now and served as an Inn, Post Office and stagecoach stop. It was moved to First Neck Lane in 1916 by Samuel L.

Parrish. The three-story traditional home sits on 2.5 acres, has 4 fireplaces, 11 bedrooms, a gunnite pool, tennis and carriage house. The home has been carefully renovated and restored. It is listed for $7,775,000 with Sotheby's International.

100 acres in Dam Neck, East Marion is now being developed as a conservation minded sub division. The property, best known as the Billy Joel property, is now owned by Beach Cove Associates and being brokered by Prudential Douglas Elliman in Southold. Broker and land specialist Enzo Morabito says that 50 acres of the parcel will be preserved for conservation. This pristine preserve is filled with wildlife and runs from the sound to the salt marshes that border a birch forest. Ten 3-acre sound-front lots will be sold for $1,750,000- $2,000,000. The secluded waterfront location is said to have drawn some big names to the area. It has been rumored that prospective buyers have included owner of Rolling Stone Magazine, Jann Wenner. When asked about Wenner's interest in the land, Mr. Morabito would not comment. The road is cut and clearing has begun. For information, contact Prudential Douglas Elliman.

On Georgica Pond, a classic 5000 sq ft 80s contemporary was uniquely designed very close to and into the contour of the shoreline. There is a view from every room. Today's regulations would keep it 150 ft from shore. Being offered for 12 million by Tina Fredericks.

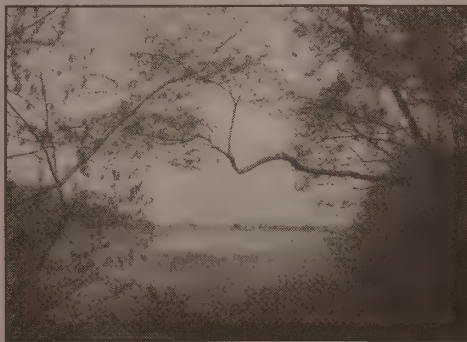

A buyer has apparently been found for the home of Montauk's most popular restaurateur. The Victorian-style oceanfront estate, on 16 acres, is located up on the same cliffs as the string of manor homes built there back in the 1890s. This very secluded area spans from Ditch Plains almost to the Point. Known for ultimate privacy, it has attracted neighbors such as Paul Simon, Andy Warhol and Dick Cavett. The sprawling front lawn runs 650' along the sea cliff. It has 3 fireplaces, covered porches just about all around, a pool, pool house, 3 car detached garage, a separate guest cottage and a never-ending view of the Atlantic. The Estate was listed with most Montauk realtors at $7.9 million and the word is that the selling price was very close.

Summer Rentals:

Although Hamptons realtors bring high numbers, there is still a healthy inventory of summer rentals in the Hamptons. John Keeshan of Montauk, who has watched the market in that town for more than 30 years, says the rental market in Montauk is weak. He says that is has been so for the past few years. He attributes this fact to inclement weather and that many former tenants have become owners and then landlords themselves. Mr. Keeshan reports that his rental listings have doubled this year. Although his office rented the same number of homes this season as last, he has just as many yet for rent.

The Numbers:

Interest rates have risen for the seventh straight week. The rates now average 5.92% on a 30-year fixed loan. The rise for the 7 week period has been 6.18%. Climbing rates are expected to inevitably lower residential real estate prices.

Police Blotter

Docu-drama Unfolds on South Fork. A fraud investigation conducted by county, state and federal government organizations snagged a local company resulting in several arrests last week with more expected to come. Employees of Sterling Enterprises have been accused of selling fake documents used to obtain driver's licenses. According to Suffolk County district attorney Thomas Spota, Sterling used the slogan "Servicios Hispanos" to target Latino immigrants on the East End. The company is believed to have sold fake New York state photo identification cards and illegal tax identification numbers among other items that were used by illegal aliens to obtain the season's most important work accessory – a New York driver's license.

Man Mistakes Garage as (Homeless) Shelter. Not in our backyard. Found hiding in a garage on Millstone Road, a Water Mill man was charged with resisting arrest, trespass and harassment in the second degree. Police told reporters that the man kicked the officers when they attempted to arrest him.

Must Be Some Good Stuff. Did he inhale? 'Cause if he didn't inhale...A North Sea man was charged with criminal possession of marijuana in the fifth degree. According to police reports, he was arrested for not being able to provide identification, for not wearing a seat belt and for the nearly one-ounce bag of weed found on the seat where he was sitting. Oops.

Lover's Quarrel Topples Toyota. The morning after the night before finds over a dozen LIPA trucks lined up on Sag Harbor's Main Street. According to police reports, a tan Toyota flipped over, striking a parked car before toppling a telephone pole. Police said the accident occurred as a result of the passenger's boyfriend grabbing the steering wheel during an argument. Charged with unlicensed operation of a vehicle in the third degree, speeding, not wearing a seat belt and driving while intoxicated, the driver was treated at Southampton Hospital for minor injuries. The passenger, suffering from more than bad judgment, was airlifted to Stony Brook University Hospital and released later the same day.

Rodeo Hoe Down at Rick's Crabby Cowboy Café. East Hampton Town ordinance enforcement officers who were investigating "housing-related complaints" lassoed the proprietor of the eponymous Rick's Crabby Cowboy Café. Arraigned on a charge of obstructing governmental administration, the owner said at a town board meeting that the officers refused to identify themselves when asked and had alarmed his tenants, which led to a heated exchange with the officers. Besides operating the restaurant, he owns and operates several legal apartments on the property. According to the town attorney, no new charges of zoning violations were pending at this time.

Did You Hear the One About...the man who was standing in the middle of the road blocking traffic? Well, when approached by police officers curious as to why he was standing in the middle of the road, he was seen throwing a bag to the ground. On closer inspection, the bag turns out to contain crack cocaine. The man was charged with disorderly conduct and third- and fifth-degree possession of a controlled substance.

Fast and Furious. Part Three. Lights. Notice all those fancy spoilers and phat exhausts lately? Camera. Seems the North Fork is ready for a high-speed close up. Action. While allegedly setting up for a drag race on Point Road and Calverton Boulevard, a man was arrested with a Suffolk County Police Department warrant and charged with traffic and vehicle violations.

CAR TROUBLE

Dear Dan,

In August 2002, I purchased a state-of-the-art, full loaded, top of the line Maxima GKE. The 2003 model had just come out and it was beautiful! Leather seats, sunroof, heated seats, BOSE stereo, even a heated steering wheel. All the luxury you could ask for with a fast engine and something you may not want—Xenon headlights.

Late January, I woke to a policeman at my door telling me that the headlights had been ripped out of my car. I couldn't believe it! Why would anyone just steal the headlights? That's when I found out that Xenon headlights were a high-ticket item for thieves. The damage amounted to about $3,000 that was billed to my insurance company less a $250 deductible.

Shortly after this incident, I received a recall notice from Nissan acknowledging that this was a problem in the Northeast. The recall would provide a certain clip and data dots to deter thieves from stealing the headlights. I had the recall done.

Two weeks later another attempt was made to steal the headlights but they only got as far as pulling out the grill and cutting the alarm and airbag wires before they were scared off by a neighbor. I assumed that the clips made it harder for them to steal and eventually they would target other cars. A couple of weeks later, the headlights were stolen again.

I contacted Nissan Consumer Complaint Department on three occasions only to be told that it was a theft problem – not their problem. I asked if the headlights could be replaced with Halogen lights but was told they were unavailable and would void the warranty on the car if I found any that could be installed. Why couldn't Nissan create non-Xenon headlights for this car? I already knew the answer, they definitely could. Why didn't they? Well, just think how much money they make on replacement parts. The sell them for $1,800 each to body shops.

I recently found out that the New Jersey Attorney General's office filed a class action suit against Nissan Motor Corporation. NMC had been aware of this problem since 2002 and did nothing to correct this or warn potential buyers.

I stopped by a dealership the other day, just out of curiosity to ask about the new Maximas. They now make them with headlights that cannot be removed and are welded somehow to the body. While walking around the lot, the very kind salesman pointed two brand new Maxima's sitting there with the front hoods twisted back, bumpers ripped, etc. – but voila, Xenon headlight still there! Only about $6,000 worth of damage. Imagine how much money Nissan can make with those replacement parts?

So now my $28K dream car is sitting safely at a body shop. I told my agent that I would not be driving the car anymore. It will have to be traded in. I don't have the heart to sell it to anyone.
